BAKER ARRESTED!

THE GRAPESHOT BACK TO PORT.

Complete Journal of the Grapeshot's Cruise.

PARTICULARS OF THE ARREST.

BAKER'S VERSION OF THE POOLE MURDER.

GREAT EXCITEMENT IN THE SYLPHIDS.

The Fugitive Committed to the Tombs.

AT 6 o'clock last evening a rumor was spread through the town that Lewis Baker, the alleged murderer of Rear Poole, was captured and a prisoner on board the Grapeshot, just then arrived from Palmas, (Canary Islands.) Soon after a line from our shipping reporter confirmed the rumor, which, being placed upon our bulletin, made a crowd about the office of Harbaugh and Hanson unusually doubtful reminded one of the nights succeeding the last Fall election. The numbers showed the same fate to say, and long before our paper had issued an Extra, were reaping out their "Extra Times. Tuesday, Herald—get the account of Baker," and asking two, three, or four cents for all sorts of old newspapers, that might possibly, but probably had not, a line about any Baker, amongst the honest bakers' advertisements that tell us where bread is sold cheapest. Before 7 o'clock we had in hand the following intensely excited and detailed account, brought in by our reporter, Mr. Stephen R. Thorne, one of the Deputy U. S. Marshals, dispatched as such by Judge Sweany to assist in the capture.

But before coming to the account let us recapitulate briefly:

HOW BAKER WAS TAKEN.

The Grapeshot left this port March 16, and arrived off Palmas April 7. The Isabella Jewett arrived there ten days afterwards, was immediately boarded and the captive, who went under an assumed name, was at once taken and removed to the bark. At first he was put in irons, but these were soon removed. The Grapeshot arrived at this port last night, and Baker was committed to the Tombs. Subjoined is the account:

A Sketch of a Voyage in the Bark Grapeshot, Capt. Richard Hepburn, to the City of Palmas, Gran Canaria Islands, in 10 Days from the Port of New-York.

SUNDAY, March 18, 1855.

Cast off hawser at 9½ A. M., at the foot of Seventh-street, E. R.; towed into the stream by the steamer Mercury, Capt. Travers, and came to another opposite Wall-street Ferry, Brooklyn side. The towboat left us, and proceeded to the New-York side; in an hour returned with Judge Sweany and the Spanish Consul, who furnished us with passports. At 11 o'clock got underway, and were towed to sea by the towboat Mercury. Parted from her at 1 o'clock. We exchanged a parting friendship; gave her two guns. Spread our sails and shaped our course for the Gran Canaria Islands. Our crew consisted of—

Captain.....RICHARD HEPBURN.
First Mate.....JOSEPH B. BAKER.
Second Mate.....CHARLES J. McDONALD.
Steward, one cook and cabin boy.....Colored Passengers.

MONDAY, March 19.—The Highlands lights were bearing by compass S. W., distance six miles, from which we take our departure. Light breezes from the west and cleared with all sail out; studdingsails set on both sides; at 6 A. M., wind hauled round to the N. E.; took studdingsails in and braced the yards sharp up.

Lat. by obs., 39 08 N.; lon. by chro., 71 47 W. Wind, N. E., later part N. E. 10 P. M., passed ship showing blue lights. Course E. S. E.

TUESDAY, March 20.—Continues with light breezes from the N. E.; 9½ in the Gulf Stream, temperature of water 10; at 4 P. M., south sea and light wind from the S. S. W.; at 7 A. M., set out of the studdingsails; wind from the W.; at 9 A. M., took in the topgallant-studdingsails; strong breezes from the south.

This day we organized and named ourselves the Shower Association.

Lat. by obs., 38 05 N., lon., by chro., 70 00 W. Wind, N. E., later part S. by E. and E. Course S. E. by E., E. S. E., calm, and E. by S.

WEDNESDAY, March 21.—Continues with strong breezes from the south and clear; at 6 P. M., squally, took in fore and main royal; at 10, midnight, steady, took in fore and main top gallant sails; at 1 A. M., wind shifted round to the north and west, accompanied with heavy rain squalls—heavy weather.

Lat. by D. R., 37 22 N., lon. by D. R., 66 40 W.; wind south, S. S. W., N. N. W., north, N. W., W. N. W.; course E. by E. half E.; run reckoned.

THURSDAY, March 22.—Begins with strong breezes from the south; at 6 P. M. took in the main-top gallant sails, steering sail. This day ends with light breezes from the east and cloudy weather.

Lat. by D. R., 37 11 N.; lon. by D. R., 64 39 W.; winds E. S. E., later part, E. S. E.; courses E. by S., N. E. by E., N. E. run reckoned.

FRIDAY, March 23.—Begins with strong breezes from the E. S. E., and squally; took in fore and main-royals; at 6 P. M. took in fore and main-top gallant sails and put one reef in the topsails and two in the fore topsails; at 8 P. M., ship under close-reefed topsails and main-sail furled and put one reef in the foresail; gale from the West with heavy sea. This day ends with strong gales from the W. N. W., accompanied with heavy swells.

Lat. by Obs. 39 15 N.; lon. by D. R., 62 39 W.; winds S. S. E., W. N. W.; courses N. E. by E., N. N. E., E. by S., half S.

No sleep last night; at midnight five this morning shipped a heavy sea; stove in the side lights of the skylight to the cabin, throwing in all into the greatest confusion. Those who occupied the state-room were quite drenched; hearing the water running in, and the noise of the broken glass and splinters of wood striking the table and side of the state-rooms, they rushed out in great confusion. One of our number, who was very sick, lay at the foot of the cabin on the cushions; with the first to the cabin door, without hat or boots. Another, in making his way, was very unfortunate, for at the moment the ship gave a sudden lurch, the cabin being dark, Mr. Thomas was thrown across the table against the side of the state room, and falling on the floor among the broken glass, hurt his right hand badly. There was considerable water in the cabin; my beds wet, stools, trunks, &c., wet and everything in confusion. Another of our party who was sick entered his carpet bag, went out in the cabin and said, "I am going ashore;" we soon found it was not as bad as we at first supposed.

SATURDAY, March 24.—Continues with moderate gales from the west; at 2 P. M. shook two reefs out of the top-sails and set the topgallant sails; set jib and jenny stay sails; at 10 M., the wind shifted round to the southwest; set all the studding sails; strong breezes from southwest and clear weather.

Lat. by observation, 36 17 N.; lon. by chro. 55 56 W.; winds W. N. W., N. W., N. E., N. N. W.; courses E. by S. half S.; calm; later part S. N. E. and E. by S. half S.

SUNDAY, March 25.—Continues with strong breezes from the West and S. W., and clear; at one bell first one to hand to go on the ship, making 22 sails all told; weather fine and pleasant; 7½ o'clock, carried away the spanker halyards blocks; passed a large ship under double topsail topgallant, standing north.

Lat. by obs. 36 22 N.; lon. by chro. 52 22 W.; wind S. S. W.; courses E. by S., half S.; distance run 180 miles.

WRITING.

A Day at Mount Vernon.

This is likely to be marked in my calendar; it is to realize to me a life dream. I am to make a pilgrimage to Mount Vernon. I cannot remember the time when I did not indulge the wish, brought less forcibly a hope, that I might see the place where WASHINGTON lived, and thus associations have vividly in my mind his name and his home.

The weather is accustomed to be propitious when I make excursions, and this morning is not an exception. The sky is cloudless, but a cool breeze sweeps across the water as we board the Geo. Washington and glide down the Potomac with a little party, all of whom, we may believe, are inspired by the same feeling, for all are bound to the same spot, and citizens of English, German and American birth, dwellers in each border State, from Pennsylvania down to the far sunny South.

It is only ten miles from the city, and of course we are in sight of the mansion before we accurately realize that we are on our way. There it is—a long-long rambling wooden house with a broad piazza, supported by numerous pillars. This is built on what was left from the river, for the hill slope in front is covered thick with fresh trees, the dense foliage of which is a perfect screen to the cultivated part of the Mount Vernon grounds. The winding path around the hill that leads to the house, has a quaint walk, and I cannot help thinking of the crowders, as I look back and see the little company of pilgrims, men, women, and children, slowly and solemnly directing their steps to a sanctuary, and though it is not to rescue it from the hands of infidels, I doubt not each one in his heart cries out, "Shame that it is not rescued from those who possess it, and preserved against the ravages of time and neglect."

A walk of a few moments brings us to the tomb which was built a few years since, and is a simple structure of brick, and consists of an inner department where the remains of WASHINGTON and his wife repose, secured from all intrusion, while in front, beneath an arch, are two marble coffins, side by side, on which are inscribed the names of "WASHINGTON," and "MARTHA his wife," and which are screened by a strong iron gate. Although we know these do not contain the precious dust, the solemnity of the impression is deepened by these emblems, and we are more gratified than if permitted to look only upon the outer walls of the tomb.

Near by, are three small marble monuments, bearing the names of those who were kindred of the great man, and all around is an open space upon the hill-side, without any attempt to adorn and make pleasing to the eye. At the top of the hill we have before us a broad lawn, shaded by stately trees; and who can stand beneath this spreading elm and look down upon the majestic Potomac sweeping by, and not think of him, the noble, majestic man, whose brow these same shadows once rested, and whose favorite walk was beneath these waving boughs.

The floor of the piazza is a mosaic of stone, and bears vividly the form of the owner comes up before me as we pace to and fro, or sit in this great chair, and think, "what a delightful place for a twilight reverie!" Here are WASHINGTON, to contemplate a life of glorious deeds, and here, with the wife of his youth and the not less beloved wife of his age, he quietly rested from his labors, and most truly he could pronounce them GOOD.

Only two or three rooms are open to visitors, and these are as WASHINGTON left them. Here is the old-fashioned sofa, the writing table, the fireplace with the old fashioned brass andirons, the fender, upon which we rest our feet, feeling sure that many a winter evening the bright wood fire has blazed upon this hearth, to shed its light upon the faces of those who spent the evening of life in this hallowed spot, and who were accustomed when all the labors of the day were over to meet here to spend a social hour before retiring. This is the study and a small cozy room, looking out upon the lawn. The hall, too, is of fresh spacious. A portrait of WASHINGTON and a few pictures are hanging upon the walls, and what is so precious as to be enclosed in a glass case and gilt frame? "The key of the Bastile," says some one, and immediately all eyes are turned to see. It is a large, clumsy looking thing, and is now covered with a thick coat of rust. I think it was hung here by WASHINGTON. But a few years ago some needed visitor broke the case and took the nail from its fastening, so that for a long time the key was missed from its accustomed place. But it is now safe enough, and is surely a curious curiosity in the halls of Mount Vernon.

We linger long to gaze upon every relic that was possessed or owned by WASHINGTON, and would gladly wander days instead of hours around this consecrated ground. But this is impossible, so we stroll into the orchard and pluck a few forbidden blossoms from the haw-tree that is blooming beneath the window; not being permitted to enter the garden, we stop at the gate and take from the good woman who stands within, an orange, which we ascertained grew upon a tree which WASHINGTON planted, a few stems of the American tulip, which sheds a delicious fragrance, a few violets and primroses, which we cherish more than gold.

The garden is very large and seems in fine order, but other parts of the grounds look sadly neglected. Everything is on a grand scale, which it seems requires a little fortune to preserve in its original perfection, and which probably the present owner cannot afford. We hope it will not be in vain another Winter that the subject is brought before Congress, of making Mount Vernon the property of the nation. There should be greater facilities of reaching it—and for roaming over it. The interest in it is every year increasing, and a century hence the throng of pilgrims will be greater than now is the home of WASHINGTON. It should be to every American a hallowed spot.

We have seen in several papers lately, the relation of a statement that WASHINGTON was addicted to the vice of profaneness. We have thought it possible that on an occasion of great provocation an oath might have escaped his lips, but we were, not long since, detailed for several days with an old gentleman, whose birth-place was near that of WASHINGTON'S, and whose father and father's father knew him well, and who himself had often been in his company. He says that any charge of immorality of any kind against WASHINGTON is wholly untrue. If he had not refrained from profanity on account of its wickedness, he would have done so on account of its vulgarity. It would have been such an offence against his dignity, so at variance with his principles of refinement, if not of religion, that no temptation would have induced him to the commission of such a sin.

It was the uniform charge against him in his boyhood that he was an aristocrat, on account of his manners. He was not a man to be approached with familiarity—was not an accessible or social man, even at his own fireside. Is it at all probable, then, that he would so lower himself, as to utter words which, in the presence of soldiers and servants, I have upon good authority that I am able to deny—upon the authority of those who were not his political friends, but who can, nevertheless, declare positive.

THE WASHINGTON was perfect. I am not at all anxious to prove, but I wish to believe, and with all the zeal and confidence of America to believe, that he was free from every stain of immorality, as he certainly was.

I have realized the dream of my childhood—the dream of many life. I have wandered through the grounds of Mount Vernon; I have gazed on the portraits and relics of the noble sires. WASHINGTON not; I have placed flowers from the tomb he planted, and listened as his name—it is no longer a dream. But vividly, and will be ever within me a living spring of inspiration—a fountain of sweet and holy thoughts.

MINNIE MYRTLE.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I always read the TIMES—through—Marine Court contempts, Reserved intent, Institutes of Mayor Wood, and all. Sometimes, too, I read over the advertisements—for no part of "human nature" is more real than its "wants." We must study something, you know, and I find rare "studies" in advertisements.

Not long since there appeared in your columns something like this: "Wanted, to go South as teacher, a lady who is a proficient on the piano, guitar, and harp, who is thoroughly acquainted with the French language, and qualified to teach drawing, coloring and oil painting. She must speak English perfectly, and sing well. No other need apply." I have never heard how many ladies did apply, nor have I enough of the Yankee faculty to "guess" how much money it was supposed would compensate "a lady" for the communication of such a variety of accomplishments to an indefinite number of pupils. But I have "wants," too—one of them a want to meet with ladies of varied cultivation and accomplishments. How many do you know, Mr. Editor, who could answer the above advertisement? If they are not already barricaded by platoons of admirers, I beg to be presented to—say one or two—and for that purpose will send you my address to-morrow. I wish the advertiser all success in his quest—and, when he finds the lady, I hope he will take care to keep her—alive.

I look sometimes, too, into the papers your neighbors print for example, the Tribune. I met there, last Summer, with something "richer" (in one sense) than the foregoing, to which (and the omission is to be regretted) was not appended on "indigenously, HORACE GREELEY." N. B.—I don't care about the Banks or Mr. ST. JOHN; but I have a weakness for letters, really "not intended for publication," and dost, of all things, on a spicy correspondence. Thus: "Wanted, a young lady, as dressmaker, companion and instructor, to five young ladies, of the ages twelve to twenty-two. She must speak French and German fluently." "Dressmaker to five young ladies!"—two of whom, perhaps three, are "grown," "in society," and require a certain (or uncertain) amount of toilette. With the dressmaking and re-making, (which economical people—like the advertiser—practice,) the office would be no sinecure, and "companionship" would follow close on all the "fittings," "fixings," and "tryings on" of the five young ladies' dresses and their appurtenances. But, after that, the "instruction"—young lady number five must be taught spelling and the multiplication table, while young lady number one wants literature and metaphysics; and so of the rest—and for all five, French and German verbs, exercises and translations. The lady is certainly not expected to be idle. The advertiser continues: "For this she will receive her board, (how considerate!) and so much money as will supply her with clothing." A single dress of two-shilling mouslin de laine, (with possibly a second for Sundays,) and linen collar and cuffs, would surely be enough. Bonnets and cloaks for going out can't be needed by those who have so much occupation within. But the liberal advertiser offers further, "Something extra if she can give lessons in music and drawing"—working "over hours," I suppose—which she will doubtless incline to—at least if she can learn to live without sleep. But how much "extra?" For each quarter say ten!—fifteen!—twenty!—extravagant, I know. The "hardest work is poorest paid." We pay talents and not industry. I don't object—I like the system—upon THACKERAY'S principle, that "women are 'subdued' into untiring affection, devotion, submission to the lordlier sex, Turks as they are." (I don't quote literally,) and, though he condemns it "on principle," he don't complain—"he is a Turk"—and he "likes it well enough." I have "talents," perhaps—"industry" I certainly have not. Pay "talents," by all means. But our young lady in this "situation," giving "extra" lessons for extra pay, may not like to apply at a dispensary for medical advice, or go to an almshouse for lodging and nursing. A "case" for both doctor and nurse she will soon be. So, suppose we say twenty (?) dollars each quarter to deposit in the Savings Bank against the fast-coming "rainy day."

This young lady cannot be expected to "go South;" for the mistress, who buys a seamstress for a thousand dollars, as "dress-maker to five young ladies," will be likely to think herself fortunate if the dresses are made, and will not expect her "nigger slave" to speak more than one language, or do "extra" work. But then, as no doubt our young lady, by this time, knows, it's a blessed thing to be free.

Mr. Editor, I have two or three more "educational" notes and whims that I could name to you. So, if the columns of the TIMES are not all bespoken, you may, perchance, hear again from

NOTICES OF NEW BOOKS.

European Celebrities.

VISITS TO EUROPEAN CELEBRITIES. By WILLIAM B. SPRAGUE, D. D. 1 vol., 12mo., pp. 308. Boston: GOULD & LINCOLN.

A book which more than any published for a considerable time, gives us glimpses of eminent men (chiefly authors) in Great Britain and Continental Europe. Dr. SPRAGUE visited them in 1828 and 1836, and very frankly confesses (what, indeed, is very evident from his narrative,) that he sometimes made circuitous routes in order to secure himself this gratification. Immediately after a rencontre with any person of note, the Doctor took "copious memoranda of the conversation, including an account of the individual's appearance and manner." After a lapse of many years, when most of the parties in question had passed away, he committed his impressions to the press, through the Presbyterian, a weekly paper, and has now collected, revised, improved and enlarged them. A fac simile of the signature of each of the persons noticed has been introduced (an agreeable novelty, which we owe to the fact of the author's being a notable and fortunate autograph collector,) and the result is a volume very full of reliable personal information, out of which, at hap-hazard, we shall here pick a few passages likely to interest our readers.

Southey is introduced at the age of 62,—shortly before the decline of his mental faculties. He is described as "rather above the middle stature, slender and graceful in his form, of dark complexion, and dark eyes, with his hair almost inky and pretty far advanced towards gray, with a countenance generally sedate, but easily lighted up with a smile; and reminding me (Dr. S.) a good deal, in his general appearance, of my friend, Mr. FIELEY MORSE, the inventor of the telegraph, though he was considerably above Mr. MORSE'S stature."

This is a capital pen-portrait, to which may be added, (what the writer of this notice can vouch for,) that during his last illness, SOUTHEY'S hair changed its color, getting back from gray to its original blackness. From his conversation with Dr. SPRAGUE, it appeared that SOUTHEY, at the age of 69, could walk from twenty to thirty miles a day, book in hand, with great ease. He knew, and spoke favorably of, Professor BYERLEY, CHANNING, Professor FARNUM, (who, he said, was very near being drowned in coming to him in the coach,) Mrs. HEMANS, the poetess, Dr. DEWEY, Professor TICKNOR, and Mr. COCKWELL. His opinion of his own immediate competitors was less eulogistic. CAMPBELL, the poet, whom he had only once seen, he considered an unhappy man—"not so much a believer as a miscHristian." His acquaintance with MOORE was equally slight, and he believed him to be amiable and harmless in his domestic relations, notwithstanding all that he had written might lead one to suppose the contrary. Not long before, MOORE had boasted at some public meeting that he had NEV reached such an age that he felt at perfect liberty to speak out his mind on any subject; "but," said SOUTHEY, "when he was a young man, he wrote as licentiously as he pleased; and now in the decline of life he wrote as transcendentally as he pleased, and I do not see what he wants more." ROGERS and ROWLES he considered amiable and excellent characters. The Ettrick Shepherd he described as one of the most striking men of genius, and quite free from affectation. JOHN WILSON he had twice met when a child, and once at he was coming down a flight of stairs with a book under his arm. WORDSWORTH, and laid his hand on his head. SOUTHEY was no believer in supernatural impressions and appearances, of which Dr. SPRAGUE relates a curious corroborative anecdote. SOUTHEY stated that he had been urged to write the History of the American Revolution, "and that the idea was suggested in consequence of his having endeavored to procure counsel for Mr. STANSBURY, the person pertaining to that period in the public offices in London; but that he had already so far by thinking on it that he could not even consider the proposal, from fairness of his own reputation, as high, they say, as he was, he could not have avoided taking a view of the question too much on the side of British oppression and misrule.

His library consisted of more than ten thousand volumes, a large portion of which were in the different Continental languages. He could read them all with perfect ease, but could never speak those languages (he said) "except in his dreams, and then he often spoke them fluently."

Dr. CHALMERS, of Edinburg, was previously known to Dr. SPRAGUE, by correspondence, before they met in 1836. His appearance was a great deal more youthful and vigorous (he was then 56,) than the author expected. Alluding to a letter from Philadelphia, the writer of which begged to be addressed as "Honorable F. W." CHALMERS said, "Then the appetite of humanity for titles does sometimes peep out, even among you, republican as you are." He had a plan of emancipation, the principle of which was, that each slave, by having a certain part of each week allowed him, might purchase his own freedom. Of President EDWARDS, the elder, he spoke with unbounded reverence and admiration. He pronounced ROBERT HALL (of Leicester) more Johnsonian in his conversation than any man he ever knew; but with all his admiration for his intellectual character, he placed him in point of his original powers, below JOHN FOSTER. He told the story of one of HALL'S parishioners coming to him to object to his preaching as not discriminatory evangelical, and especially as having too little in it of the doctrine of predestination—to which HALL replied, "You believe that doctrine, do you, Sir?" "Yes, Sir," said the parishioner, "indeed I do." "And so do I," answered HALL: "I believe you were predestined to be a fool, and you have made your calling and election sure."

CHALMERS gave an interesting account of his habits of writing and preaching. He never could (this to advantage till he had taken the pen) be awake about 6 in the morning, and partly sitting up in the bed and partly lying down, took his pen and ink, and in that lazy, luxurious posture, wrote in short-hand. His ordinary writing was a sprawling scrawl, nearly illegible. He commenced preaching, he said, was reading almost entirely, though he occasionally threw off extemporaneous sentences into his written sermons. His difficulty in extemporizing was that he felt all the time that he was not making it strong enough, and dwelt too long upon a thought, and when he had advanced twenty minutes in the time, he had not advanced more than five in his subject. (This, we suspect, is the weak point of most extempore sermons—they are apt to run into diffuseness.) Speaking of the state of religion in America, his belief was that "in the better part of the United States, there was more serious religion than there was in Scotland. It had been a sort of day-dream with him that if he came to a green old age, he might come to Absorbter a few months, and mentioned, that there he would like to take, which was chiefly through the Northern States, though he would like to go as far West as Pittsburg, which, by a slight geographical mistake, he located near the mouth of the Missouri."

Lord JEFFREY, to whom the author was introduced by Mrs. OPIE, (although reported to have no great partiality for Americans,) received him with the greatest kindness. He was a small man, of an uncommonly lively expression of countenance, and extremely rapid in his movements, and fluent in his conversation. Dr. SPRAGUE was "exceedingly struck with his graceful and admirable delivery of English," which, he said, "so entirely free from any distinctive accent." This is odd, for JEFFREY'S accent was notoriously had—a harsh Scottish pronunciation, made worse by an attempt to soften it by English affectation. In private life it was less remarkable, but at the bar, in Parliament, and even on the Bench, (where he would naturally have more deliberate utterance,) JEFFREY was sharp and unmusical, a sort of human screech-owl. He expressed a high opinion of the character and talents of our Chancellor KENT, and a very low opinion of the wisdom that had ordained that the Chancellor and Judges in the State of New-York should leave their office at the age of sixty. In point of fact, JEFFREY himself was nearly sixty-one when placed upon the Bench.

Professor WILSON, (who of the author's acquaintances, is described (in 1836) as somewhat above the middle stature, with a strongly marked face, and talking on every subject that came up, with rapidity and point,) WASHINGTON IRVING, he considered "as quite a model of good taste," and said that COOPER, with far more genius than taste, had dashed along, mixing up the good and the bad together, at a strange rate.

When SAMUEL ROGERS, the poet, was visited nearly twenty years ago, "he had the appearance of a man of seventy; he was of about the middle height, stood perfectly erect, and had a face beaming with intelligence and good nature." One of his remarks, (and a true one,) was that he had never known a great man who was not simple and clear. He showed, as his greatest literary treasure, the written agreement between MILTON and his publisher, which secured to the latter the right to print the Paradise Lost, on condition of his paying six pounds for each edition. For this document ROGERS paid sixty pounds.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, with whom he previously had some correspondence, drew the author to Ireland. He visited her at Edgworth House, about sixty miles from Dublin. In her personal appearance she was anything but what he expected. "She was below the middle size; her face was exceedingly plain, though strongly indicative of intellect; and though she seemed to possess great vigor of body as well as of mind, it was, after all, the vigor of old age. I supposed her to be about sixty-five, but I believe she was actually on the wrong side of seventy." (She was sixty-nine at the time.) She was decidedly one of the best talkers Dr. SPRAGUE ever met with. She thought HANNAH MORE, (who had commenced with writing dull tragedies) was a little too partisanical in her old age, in thinking it a loss of time to read Sir. WALTER SCOTT'S works. At her house Dr. SPRAGUE saw the miniature of her father's first wife (he had married in succession,) and learned that she had been HONORA SNEYDE, to whom Major ANDRE had been engaged to be married.

We might easily go on, spinning column after column of readable gossip of this kind, out of Dr. SPRAGUE'S book, but have done enough, (for the present at least,) to indicate its character. About ninety "celebrities," British, German and French, are introduced, at more or less length, and there is not a dull page in the volume. We notice, as an omission which should be remedied in future editions, that in no instance does Dr. SPRAGUE give any information (even in as narrow a space as a two-line foot note,) of the time when each personage was born and died. The public will be glad to learn that Dr. SPRAGUE has materials for another volume. The sooner he gives it to the world the better.

THE MOST EMINENT ORATORS AND STATESMEN OF ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES. By DAVID A. HARSHA. 1 vol. large 8vo. C. SCRIBNER, New-York.

An important work, satisfactorily edited. The orators who are taken in hand by Mr. HARSHA are Demosthenes, Cicero, Lord Chatham, Burke, Grattan, Fox, Erskine, Curran, Sheridan, W. Pitt, Canning, Brougham, Patrick Henry, Fisher Ames, H. Clay, Calhoun, Webster, and Everett. Of each individual thus noticed there is a biography. The best specimens of each orator's peculiar style are given, with strict attention to dates, and the chronological order has been adhered to, not only in the notice of biographical events, but in the extracts. The result is, that the reader may compare the later with the earlier speeches, mark the growth of mind, and note the development and variations of style. Mr. HARSHA has further added to the value and interest of the collection, by his own comments on the leading peculiarities of each orator. In every instance, judging for himself, he has formed and expressed an individual opinion, and he has added the opinions expressed on the same subject by distinguished critics, many of whom had themselves witnessed the most brilliant exhibitions of the great men in question. Wherever it illustrated the character of a speaker, or the subject of his speech, anecdotes have been freely introduced. The work is judiciously annotated, also.

One half of the volume is devoted to the consideration of the leading orators of America, and their memoirs are extremely interesting. The leading incidents of their respective careers are related, succinctly and clearly. A portrait of WEBSTER forms a suitable frontispiece.

A. S. BARNES & Co. have reissued Dr. UNGERWITZER'S Europe, its Past and Present Condition. At this moment, when European subjects excite so much attention, it would be satisfactory to have reliable information on the statistics and general position, natural and social, of every country in Europe. This volume conveys such information to a certain extent, but is deficient in point of latest intelligence. For example, it speaks of France, in 1855, as still being under a Republican Government, thus ignoring the Empire. An old almanack, however useful it may have been in its time, is as available, for the present year, as a book of reference several years behind the time in its facts.

Mr. SCRIBNER has published a new volume, by N. P. WILLIS, bearing the name of The Rag-Bag, a Collection of Ephemera. It consists of articles contributed to a popular City journal, by one of the most agreeable writers of the day—fragmentary MORCEAUX, rather too good to be lost in such a temporary vehicle as a weekly newspaper. They are running notes, in fact, upon events and personages of the passing day, always written with smartness, and sometimes showing great knowledge of the world and much tact in seizing upon the salient points connected with social and fashionable life and manners, at home and abroad.

The Teacher's Last Lesson (Boston: GOULD & LINCOLN,) is a memoir of MARTHA WHITING, late of Charlestown Female Seminary, by CATHERINE E. BEECHER, an associate teacher. We believe that of the subject of this biography it may be truly said, "she walked with God." Her life was a practical homily, and its incidents are related affectionately and clearly by one who knew her well. She was self-devoted to the high mission of instructing youth, and it is with them, as in this volume, her books should remain, after what was mortality of earnest life perished.

Nature and Human Nature, (published by TRIBNER & TOWNSEND,) comes to us from the pen of the versatile Sam Slick, alias Judge HALIBURTON, of Nova Scotia. It consists of a continued story of dressing mining to make a fortune in the new side, in hot weather, when nothing else is especially interesting. But it authoritatively that Mr. Slick has already written himself out. Compared with his earlier productions, the present volume is rather "weary, stale, flat and unprofitable."

My Brother's Keeper. By A. D WARNER, author of Dollars and Cents, (APPLETONS, New-York,) is a serious novel, locality and personages American. Well written, too; scenery well described—though rather glanced at than dwelt upon; characters fairly developed, each with his or her distinct individuality. Dialogue largely introduced, seldom running into dreariness, never running out of the natural. Incidents probable enough, and not involved. In a word, a book which may be read a second time.

Foster's History of the War, (SAMPSON, LOW & SON, London, and HARPER & BROTHERS, New-York,) is a pocket volume, written with considerable impartiality, recording the events, political and military, of the present war with Russia. It brings the narrative down to the close of 1854, and is illustrated with two maps of the Crimea—one showing the general features of the country, the other the position of the allies before Sebastopol. This book is selling largely in England.

NEW-HAVEN RAILROAD CASE.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge E. P. Cowles.

The New-York and New-Haven Railroad Company vs. Robert Schuyler and 323 others, being holders of so-called Schuyler Stock.

OPINION.

The defendant Cross demurs to the complaint, and on grounds which raise the question whether this suit can be sustained. The facts set forth in the complaint are as follows:

The plaintiff is a Corporation, owning and operating a Railroad extending from New-Haven to New-York. The capital authorized by the Charter is limited to $2,000,000, represented by 20,000 shares of stock—all of the shares except 78 having been issued, and the capital paid in, less about $700 on the 78 shares, several years since. Transfer books of the stock were kept at the City of New-York and two other places, where transfers of the stock were made, and certificates issued as occasion required. From the organization of the Company in 1846 to the third of July, 1854, Robert Schuyler was the President and Transfer Agent of the Company, having his station and place of business at the Office of the Company in New-York. As early as October, 1853, he commenced a series of fraudulent acts, extending over the whole period of time intermediate that date, and the 3d July, 1854, during which time unknown to the plaintiff, he issued and disposed of large numbers of certificates of stock of the Company, which on their face purported to be genuine, were executed and signed in the same manner as genuine certificates, and undistinguishable from them, but which in fact were fraudulent over issues for his own private purposes. Some of these he issued to a firm of which he was a member. The others were issued to divers other persons.

In other instances, after making transfers of stock for other parties on the books of the Company he failed to cancel the old certificates which were surrendered for that purpose, but fraudulently re-issued them, as genuine certificates of stock owned by himself.

In furtherance of his designs he allowed clerks of his firm to give the firm a false credit on the stock ledger of the Railroad Company, by which it was made ostensibly to appear that such firm had stock to their credit on the books of the Company to $1,000,000, when in truth it owned none.

These false certificates, purporting to be genuine, and these originally genuine certificates, which, instead of being cancelled, were reissued, were used by Robert Schuyler, in his own and in the business of his firm, under representations that they were genuine, chiefly for the purpose of borrowing money; were sold openly in the market, as genuine stock in some instances, and have passed in this way into the hands of the defendants, the present holders.

In some instances this over-issued stock has become commingled with genuine, by having, in the regular course of business, been transferred and incorporated into a certificate with the genuine.

The whole false issue amounts to near $2,000,000, 9,583 shares now stand on the books of the Railroad Company, in the names of 29 persons and firms, to whom it had been transferred by the firm to which Schuyler belonged. The balance of such over issues have gone to the hands of 300 other persons and firms at different times, in different amounts, from different persons, and many of these holders are also the holders of genuine stock.

Intermediate the 29th June and the 3d July, 1854, Schuyler, the President and transfer agent of the Company, being sick, Mr. Worthen, the Vice President, who was also one of the Directors, undertook, but as plaintiff say, without authority, to act as transfer agent in the place of Schuyler, and unaware of Schuyler's frauds, transferred 4,450 shares of that false stock for 21 different persons and firms, supposing the certificates he received and transferred to be genuine.

Some of the holders of this over issue, as the complaint alleges, took, knowing that the certificates were fictitious, some with reason to believe so, some on usurious contracts, many under circumstances which should have put them on inquiry, and many others under circumstances and upon considerations unknown to the plaintiffs.

They all claim rights against the Company, some that they are stockholders, others that they are either stockholders or have a right of action against the Company for their losses. Some claim damages to the full nominal par value of the certificates they hold—others for the money they have actually advanced, while all assert a claim upon the Company in some form.

It is not denied that some of these fraudulently issued certificates have gone into the hands of entirely innocent parties for value.

Several of the defendants have sued the Company; some suits are pending in this Court, some in the Superior Court, and others in the Common Pleas of this City. Other suits are threatened. The plaintiff has joined in this suit Robert Schuyler and all the alleged owners or holders of this over-issue stock and prays that the certificates may be decreed illegal and void, and be surrendered up and cancelled, that until these questions are all settled those who have sued be stayed in their proceedings, that those who have not be restrained from suing, that the suits now pending be consolidated with this, and closes with the usual general prayer for such further or other relief as is meet and proper.

To this complaint this demurrer is interposed.

From the above examination of the complaint, it is seen that the holders of this over-issued Stock, (and which, for distinction, I will call spurious Stock,) have not come in possession of it under a uniform state of facts.

1. There is the firm of R. & G. L. Schuyler, who, or whose assignees, hold by title derived directly from R. Schuyler himself, a member of the firm and the author of the fraud. Whether the firm paid value for it does not appear.

2. There is the class who took from Schuyler with knowledge of the fraud, or have taken under circumstances which it is alleged should have put them on inquiry.

3. A class who hold by title, based on usurious contracts with Schuyler.

4. Another still to whom it has been hypothecated as security.

5. There is a class who hold certificates originally valid and regularly issued, but which have been surrendered up for cancellation, and then, as plaintiff alleges, stolen by Schuyler and reissued.

6. There is another class who hold under certificates issued by the Vice President, Worthen.

7. There is another class of innocent holders who have taken without knowledge of any fraud. I assume that such is the fact, because it is not averred in the complaint to the contrary, and among these numerous holders of the consideration of whose purchase the plaintiff is ignorant, the presumption is they are innocent holders till the contrary is alleged.

8. There is still another class who hold certificates representing in part genuine and in part spurious stock.

Now, upon these facts, assuming them as true, and assuming that this suit shall proceed with the view of determining all questions arising on the facts, it is quite clear that some of these holders are entitled to receive, whatever may be the decree as to others.

With regard to others, it is equally clear the plaintiff would, at the proper time, be entitled to judgment, while with regard to others still, the respective rights of the parties could not be decreed without the solution of difficult and perplexing questions of law, and no doubtedly of intricate questions of both law and fact, since we are not to overlook that the parties defendants will either joined or be made to join by demur.

The same fact that finally rights would necessarily be in the course of judgment decreed against the several parties separately, and as above observed, in some cases, must be against the Railroad Company, in other cases it is to decree. Where to do this they have taken with full knowledge of the fraud, and the complaint avers that some did, the decree must be against the holder—a proposition too obviously true to need discussion. As regards the innocent holders, those who have taken for value without knowledge of, or cause to suspect the fraud, the authority of Pierson vs. Duncan, (fair plaintiff, in some form is necessary. True, the proposition may cause up the inquiry on this demurrer and it is but just to say was not made a subject of discussion by the counsel, (whom I regret engaged in the argument. Yet, in the view I take of the case, it presents itself as forming one of the elements in the proposition I am seeking to demonstrate, viz.: that upon the facts set forth in the complaint, the decree in this suit, if the bill be sustained, cannot be against the plaintiff so as some at least of the defendants.

Under that view of the case I am permitted, as regards the innocent holders for value without notice, to say, that well settled, long established principles of law defining the responsibility incurred by principals for the acts of their agents, determine the question of liability for the acts of Schuyler against this corporation, while at the same time fair dealing, an enlightened equity, sound morals and public policy all concur in requiring there should be no relaxation of the rule. Corporations capable like natural persons of constituting general agents, doing their business solely through agents and boards or directors, in whom all having transactions with them must more or less confide, should be held to a very strict accountability for the acts of their agents, and the policy and necessity of such rule increases in practical importance just in proportion to the magnitude of the business entrusted to, and performed by those corporate bodies.

Passing on to the class of persons who hold these certificates under usurious contracts, while I am not called upon to anticipate at this stage of the case what rule of law must be applied there, it is sufficient to say that as to those holders, the decree depends on a solution of questions of both law and fact, (for I cannot assume that the usury will not be denied by answer,) which, in their character, are separate and distinct from, and independent of, the questions raised in the other classes of cases.

Again, the rights of parties holding certificates originally valid, then surrendered for cancellation, and afterward surreptitiously issued, requires the solution of still other questions of law, (probably of law and fact,) as the plaintiff claims to treat such certificates as stolen, and as not resting in any other holder, whether innocent or guilty, either right of property or of action.

And so as to all of these holders, the different state of facts under which each has taken, and the different rules to be solved and applied, show that not only must there be separate and distinct adjudications in their nature, independent each of the other, but also that no one class of holders has necessarily any interest in the questions which must control as to every other class.

Each party is entitled to be separately heard, and this requires separate trials for each separate defendant, since between no two of them is there a privity of title or interest.

A further effect, which necessarily follows a joinder of all these defendants, is that while each defendant prefers a claim which is distinct from that of every other, yet no judgment can be given in his favor until a general decree is made as to all.

Thus the one who holds as a bona fide purchaser without notice cannot, upon proving the facts which apply to his case, take judgment and enforce his rights without regard to the other defendants, but must remain inactive with no ability to proceed until all the complex, intricate and perplexing questions of law and fact affecting every other party have been tried, the questions passed upon, appeals taken and disposed of, (should either party wish to appeal,) reviewed in the Appellate Court, perhaps sent back, then retried, redetermined, and perhaps (for who knows to the contrary!) reappealed, and all this, too, while he has no interest whatsoever in the questions thus litigated between the plaintiff and any other party than himself.

If this suit is to be maintained such must necessarily be its effect, provided the bill has for its object the end avowed by the plaintiff, viz., a final determination between the plaintiff and each holder of all questions respecting this over-issue of stock. If such is the object of the bill, the results I have mentioned must follow. If it is not, the bill should be dismissed.

I have assumed that the several defendants may, by way of counter claim, set up the demands they assert against the Company. Whether, under the Code, they can do so may be a serious question, but, without deciding, I will assume they can, since that is the view of the case most favorable to the plaintiff. Assuming that, and then tracing, as we have, the nature of the proceedings to follow, provided the demurrer is overruled, with a view of determining the character of the suit, we find it resolves itself into a proceeding to try in one suit nearly 300 separate and distinct causes of action, claimed to be held by as many different parties, having but one feature common to all, viz.: that the basis of these several claims is a fraud perpetrated by the plaintiffs' agent. Will such an action lie?

Plaintiffs aver it can be sustained as a bill of interpleader; but that seems impossible, because the plaintiff in such bill must have no interest in the subject of the litigation.

When that is the case, and the plaintiff has not the means, without hazard to himself, of determining to whom among several and rival claimants the fund in his hands is properly payable, he will be permitted to bring the fund into Court, and compel the rival claimants to interplead each with the other, while the only duress the plaintiff can have is that the bill was properly filed.

I can see no feature in this case which in principle brings it within that class of bills. Story Eq. Juris. sec. 507, and cases there cited; Har. Ch. p. 96; Cooper's Eq. p. 456; Atkinson vs. Monks, 4 Cowen, 691. (708.). In the case last cited Mr. Justice Sutherland lays down the following as the distinguishing feature of a bill of interpleader:

1st, That two or more persons have preferred a claim against the plaintiff. 2d, That they claim the same thing. 3d, That the plaintiff cannot, without hazard, determine to whom it belongs; and 4th, That he has no interest in the thing claimed. Here the plaintiff is directly interested. The suits brought are to recover directly from this corporation the losses sustained by these several holders, or in some form to make the corporation itself responsible for the acts complained of. Again, these parties do not claim the same thing; further than they all seek to make the corporation personally liable for their losses. But this is not within the meaning of the rule above stated, any more claiming the same fund, or thing, or duty, than would be several different claims by several different parties to recover for as many several and independent wrongs inflicted on each, and for which each would have his separate redress.

It is agreed that the plaintiff has really no interest in this controversy, on the ground that the Corporation is but a trustee charged with the protection of the interests of the holders of stock, and holding its property in trust merely for the several individual Corporators, and so disinterested as between the holders of the genuine and alleged fraudulent stock. The argument overlooks the fact that it is the aggregation of individual Corporators, united under a charter which constitutes that legal entity, that artificial statutory person, which is created by law and termed a Corporation.

In this case the aggregate body of individual Corporators united together under this charter, which gives them a common name, a common seal, perpetual succession, and which is known by the name of the New-York and New-Haven Railroad Company, is what constitutes this Corporation.

The Charter merely binds together in interest (so that it can act with unity) this body of constantly changing persons, and, in the very nature of things, there can exist between the Corporation and the individual Corporators, by virtue of this corporate organization, no such relation as that of trustee and cestui que trust.

A Corporation is a unity, but it is the aggregation of the individual Corporators under the Charter which makes the unit. Kyd on Corp., 13 Dess.; Call vs. Woodman, 4 Wheat 430; Providence Bank vs. Billings, 4 Peters 562.

Nor can the bill be sustained as one in the nature of a bill of interpleader, in such cases the plaintiff has a certain species of interest in the matter in dispute, but his rights are affected by rival claimants, like the case of a mortgager who, wishing to pay up his mortgage and have the lien discharged, finds that several parties claim the moneys which he admits to be due to some one. The Court will allow a bill in the nature of a bill of interpleader in such case. And numerous other cases might be cited when such bills are proper, but the facts must bring them within the same general principles. Story's Eq. Juris. 506, and the cases there cited; but there is no analogy between that class of cases and the one here. The relief the plaintiff asks consists in the assertion of a positive right, adverse and hostile as to the parties defendants. Plaintiff charges that the defendants hold spurious certificates of the stock of the Company, and demands that these certificates be declared void, surrendered up and cancelled.

Here at once is a direct conflict between the plaintiff and the defendants. Now how, or in what way are the defendants to interplead? What has any one defendant to demand as against any other defendant, or against the aggregate of the defendants? Should the Court decree them to interplead, what are they to plead? what judgment is the Court to give as between these several defendants? It is quite plain what judgment must be given on the facts pleaded as between plaintiff and some of these defendants; but as between defendant and defendant, it is equally plain there is no judgment to be rendered.

Nor can I discover any principle on which the complaint can be sustained as a bill of peace. Such bills are well known and are proper in a variety of instances, and may be filed against a large number of parties. Such as a bill to establish a right to an exclusive, as against many who claim a several right of fishery. To establish a right to the sectional enjoyment of a tithe of land against all the inhabitants of a particular parish, district, or township, claiming rights of common in the same land. A bill by a patentee to establish or protect his rights against numerous others engaged in infringing those rights, and in numerous other instances, where the main question to be decided applies equally as all the defendants, or in one in which they are all equally interested or with which they are in some way connected. Story Eq. Juris. sec. 400, 2 John. Ch. 500. Trustees of town of Hunterdon vs. Nichol, Brinckerhoff vs. Brown, 4 John. Ch. R. 124.

So also bills filed by a party claiming some right or entitled to some relief against all of the defendants, (and they may be very numerous) based upon a conspiracy or some action among these parties for the wrongful act of a general character, to the injury of, or in fraud of the rights of the plaintiff, one of this class. In such cases, to avoid multiplicity of suits, the bill will

FROM HAVANA.

The United States Mail steamship Granada, R. P. GRIFFIN, Esq., Commanding, four days and twelve hours from Havana, has arrived at this port. The Granada left New-Orleans May 3, at 9 A. M., and on the 5th, being short of coal, was obliged to return to S. W. Pass for a supply. She left again on the 7th, at 7 A. M.; and made the run to Havana in forty hours, being the fastest time on record. She left Havana for this port May 10, at 2 P. M.

The United States Mail steamship El Dorado, Capt. GRAY, was at Havana when the Granada arrived; received the California mails and passengers, and left for Aspinwall on the 10th inst. The news from Havana is not of any importance.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

HAVANA, Thursday, May 10, 1855.

Just after mailing my advices by the Isabel, intended for the direct steamer, Granada, the delinquent entered port, too late to apply the remedy. It is said that for want of coal, she was compelled to return to the Balize, which would indicate the want of providence somewhere. She left the second time, Tuesday morning, at 6 o'clock, and was in this harbor at 6½ o'clock on Thursday—to day—making the time, while at work with plenty of food for her furnaces. I hear the passengers remark that coal was not the only want; that the pinching process was exhibited in scanty allowance in every department—owing to the new organization, I presume. She leaves to-day, at 12 or 1 o'clock P. M.

The news by the Atlantic, just received, is exciting speculation among our Spanish friends. It is not digested with amiability.

Since my notes of the morning, we hear nothing of interest. As ever, &c.

NEW-YORK CITY.

American and Foreign Employment Society.

The first anniversary of the American and Foreign Employment Society was held at the Society's Rooms, Bible House, Astor-place, on Monday evening, FRYER COOPER, the President, presided. From the Annual Report, which was read by D. R. THOMASSON, the General Agent, we learn that this Society was organized on the 1st of March, 1854, for the purpose of affording aid and advice to the newly arrived emigrant, to notify him members to his amelioration of the existence and duties of the Society, so as to prevent him from becoming the dupe of designing parties when he comes here; to direct emigrants to places of abode while in the City, where they may be secure from imposition and plunder; to furnish legal and pecuniary aid to such emigrants as may have been the victims of oppression and fraud. To obtain full information as to the different sections of the country suitable for settlement, and the demand for labor; to prepare full and accurate instructions as to the various inland routes and of transit, and to forward emigrants to any part of the country, by the best and cheapest conveyance; to induce emigrants to proceed to the country and to direct them to the most suitable localities, &c. To facilitate these laudable objects the Society has two agents in Europe, one for Great Britain and one for the Continent, both of whom act gratuitously. Although organized the March previous, the the Society did not commence active operations till October, and during that period 4,708 emigrants have been furnished with employment, and sent into the country. The receipts of the Society since its organization amount to $7,[illegible], and the expenditures during the same period, $7,[illegible], leaving a balance of $[illegible] in the treasury in the present time.

After the reading of the reports &c., the Society re-elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President, FRYER COOPER; Vice-Presidents, BERNHAR PARMELY, Rev. Dr. ABE D. SMITH; Treasurer, FRANCIS A. PARMELY; Corresponding Secretary, MORTIMER DE MORTA; Recording Secretary, JASPER E. CORNING; General Agent, D. R. THOMASON; Superintendents, J. Seymour, M. Tonkerown.

A number of Directors and a Board of Managers, including the names of many of our most distinguished and philanthropic citizens, were also chosen.

After the appointment of a Committee to take into consideration the propriety of making some specified verbal amendments in the Constitution, the Society adjourned.

In the Halls of Justice, before Justice CONNOLLY, Monday morning, the particulars of a very singular matrimonial affair were revealed, relative to the abandoning of a wife in London some twenty years ago. It seems the deserted female arrived here from Europe a few weeks since, by a Canard steamer, in pursuit of her wedding husband, who has been absent for nearly a quarter of a century, during which time he became married to a Yankee lady, and has reared a family of fourteen in number. The "original" and persevering wife has labored incessantly to find the whereabouts of her deceptive companion; and having traced him to the corner of Hudson and Beach-streets, she made the following affidavit:

City and County of New-York, ss.—GEORGIANA MATILDA BATE, of No. 4 Carlisle-street, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that she is the lawful wife of JOHN HENRY BATE, has been married to him twenty years, and that her said husband has abandoned deponent without making any provision for her support according to his means. Deponent prays that her said husband may be arrested and dealt with as the law directs.

Sworn before me this 11th day of May, 1855.

MICHAEL CONNOLLY, Police Justice.

(Signed.) GEORGIANA M'MATILDA BATE, mark.

Upon this sworn statement the Magistrate issued his warrant for the arrest of Mr. BATE, and Sergeant STEWART J. SMITH was dispatched to execute the said process. When the officer arrived at Mr. BATE's place of residence he informed the gentleman the nature of his business, which seemed to seriously shock his nerves, and he laughingly replied, "What, a warrant for me? It can't be! It can't be!" "It is most assuredly for you," rejoined the officer, "if your name is JOHN HENRY BATE."

The Accused—(impatiently)—What is the name of Heaven in the warrant for, Mr. Officer?

The Officer—It is to answer the charge of abandoning your wife, Sir.

The Accused—Why, Mr. Officer, that cannot be, for my wife and family are now in the adjoining house. Therefore, a mistake has certainly been made somewhere in the matter. Mr. B. continued to assure the officer that he was the wrong man, and invited the vigilant into his dwelling to see his wife and children.

The officer was then requested to accompany Mr. BATE to his house and see his wife and children, but believing he told the truth, he did not enter the premises. He was much puzzled as to the course he should pursue, but finally returned to the Court room where he made a full statement to the magistrate. The fair complainant was then visited by the Sergeant, and she exhibited her "marriage certificate," as executed in England twenty years ago.

The second wife then informed that his "first love" was in town, and he was accordingly brought to the Tombs to answer the charge, but he denied all knowledge of the woman, and says "he never saw her before." The lady, however, remarked that his story was a mere ruse to deceive the authorities, as he had previously done in Canada West, whence she pursued him seven or eight years ago. A hearing will take place in a few days, when further disclosures will be made.

Bitten by Rabid Dog.

A man named EDWARD BRANNSFIELD, residing at No. 46 Roosevelt-street, was bitten about a month ago on the upper lip by a rabid dog. The wound healed up, but broke out again last Friday, and by the advice of Dr. RUSH, he was taken to the New-York Hospital. There is every prospect of his dying from hydrophobia.

Sunday Liquor Traffic.

The Captain of the Twenty-first District reports that all the rum holes in that Ward were in full blast on Sunday.

Horticultural Exhibition.

The New-York Horticultural Society, at a special meeting held on Sunday evening, resolved to hold a Horticultural Exhibition in Clinton Hall, sometime in June. The use of a suitable room for the exhibition has been tendered to the Society by the Young Men's Christian Association.

Recovery of Stolen Property.

About five weeks ago the store No. 8 William-street, and the store No. 82 Broadway, were forcibly entered, and a large quantity of stocks and silks stolen therefrom. On Monday Sergeant Bogardus, of the Seventh Ward police, Brooklyn, got track of some of the property, and found a quantity of pieces of the stolen goods at the house of Mrs. Ann Ryan, No. 150 Sumner-street. The officer carried the property to the Tombs, and gave it into the custody of the Clerk, Mr. Johnson, who will hold it until claimed.

Board of Ten Governors.

The Board of Ten Governors held their regular weekly meeting yesterday afternoon. Present, the President, (Mr. TOWNSEND,) Governors HENRY, HERMAN, WEST, DUER, HERRICK, DUGRO, TAYLOR and DRAPER.

From the regulations, it appears that the total number of persons remaining in the various institutions under charge of the Governors for the week ending May 12, 1855, was: At Bellevue Hospital, 240; Lunatic Asylum, 561; Alms-house, 968; Penitentiary, 383; Penitentiary Hospital, from Penitentiary, 108; Penitentiary Hospital, from Workhouse, 116; Penitentiary Hospital, from Almshouse, 14; Workhouse, 786; Small-Pox Hospital, 11; Randall's Island, 612; Randall's Hospital, 302; City Prison, 209; Second District Prison, 18; Third District Prison, 14; Colored Home, 247; Colored Orphan Asylum, 190; Children at nurse, 177. Total, 5,755; increase, 97. Number remaining May 5, 1855, 5,658. Admitted, 1,331. Total, 7,089. Died, 80; discharged, 1,304; sent to Penitentiary, 63; sent to State Prison, 9.

A communication was received from the Warden of the Almshouse, submitting that the beef furnished by the contractor was not of the quality contracted for. Referred to the Committee on Supplies.

A communication was also received from Mr. A. C. Pinkney, clerk of the Bellevue Hospital, setting forth the particulars of an alleged brutal assault and battery committed on his person by sundry of the physicians of that institution. Referred to the Committee on Bellevue Hospital.

On motion of Governor WEST, an election was gone into for Clerk of the Penitentiary, vice —— Flagler, deceased, which resulted in the election of John Flagler, son of the deceased.

After some further proceedings of no public interest, the Board adjourned.

Death of General Lamb.

Gen. ANTHONY LAMB expired Sunday evening, about 6 o'clock, in the 64th year of his age. Gen. LAMB has always occupied a high place in the estimation of his fellow citizens. He represented the Fifth Ward in the Board of Aldermen from 1828 to 1831, and was the first Whig member of the Common Council elected in that Ward. At the time of his death he was President of the New-York State Society of Cincinnati. He retained his mental faculties unimpaired to the last, and up to the time of his final illness, his bodily health was remarkable for one of his age.

The New-York Eye Infirmary.

The Committee in behalf of the New-York Eye Infirmary publish an appeal to the public for further aid. The State Legislature, in 1854, granted to it $10,000, on condition that $20,000 more be raised by private subscription. Of the latter, about $8,000 has already been subscribed. The new Infirmary buildings, at the corner of Thirteenth-street and Second-avenue, will be completed by the 1st of April, 1856.

A Disorderly House.

The disorderly house kept by CHARLIE WILLIAMS as a dance house, was on Monday broken up by Officers MANSFIELD and WEST, of the First District Police Court. WILLIAMS and his wife and six girls were arrested. The girls acknowledged to being paid $5 a week for dancing.

A Foundling.

Monday evening, about 11 o'clock, Officer CONCKLIN found a fine healthy infant female child, apparently about two weeks old. It was dressed very nicely and clean, and when discovered by the officer lay quite comfortable and contented in a basket. The foundling was conveyed to the Almshouse.

Accidents.

JAMES MACKLEHANY, the driver of a lumber wagon, fell from his seat and was seriously injured by the wheels passing over him yesterday afternoon. Yesterday Stage No. 356 of the Telegraph Line, ran into a Second-avenue car on the corner of Eldridge and Grand streets, and severely injured a boy who was standing on the platform.

Attempted Suicide.

MARGARET DEAR, a German woman, attempted to commit suicide yesterday by jumping off the dock, foot of Warren-street, into the river. She was rescued by the spectators. No reason is assigned for the act.

Serious Accident.

A young lad named LYNCH, was trodden under foot by a run-away horse in Ninth-avenue, near Forty-second-street, and had one of his legs broken, besides being otherwise injured. He was conveyed to Bellevue Hospital.

A Precocious Youth.

EDWARD LEONARD, a boy about 12 years of age, was on Monday brought up before Justice FRANCHY on a charge of burglary and robbery. The Magistrate ordered his property sent him to the Juvenile Asylum.

☞ The Battery enlargement is progressing slowly. The west side of Castle Garden has been filled in to exterior line of West-street. There is some difficulty caused by the settling of the new made ground; the wall which acts as a breakwater, is giving way and seriously impedes the work. The water in this part of the work was scarcely fifty feet deep.

☞ A Correspondent of the Courier, says: "The price of steerage passage from the German ports to New-York, which last Fall was 54 to 56 thalers, has now sunk down to 30 and 20 thalers."

Decisions in Admiralty.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—MAY 15.

Before Judge Nelson.

INSPECTOR'S CERTIFICATE—PENALTY—IMPORTANT TO STEAMBOATS.

The following decision was rendered by the Court this morning:

The United States vs. The Steamboat Manhattan.—NELSON, C. J.—This is a libel of information filed by the Government against the steamboat Manhattan, to recover a penalty of $500, for not complying with one of the requisitions of the act of Congress, passed Aug. 10, 1852, for the better security of the lives of passengers on board vessels propelled by steam.

The first section of the act provides "that no license, register, or enrollment under the provisions of this, or the act to which this is an amendment, shall be granted, or other papers issued by any Collector to any vessel propelled in whole or in part by steam and carrying passengers, until he shall have satisfactory evidence that all the provisions of this act shall have been fully complied with: and if any such vessel shall be navigated with passengers on board, without complying with the terms of this act, the owners thereof, and the vessel itself, shall be subject to the penalties contained in the second section of the act to which this is an amendment." (Lit. & Br. Ed. Laws 1851-2, p. 61.)

The only terms of the act not complied with, as charged in the information in this case, is the neglect to obtain from the Collector of the Customs a certified copy of the certificate of the Board of Inspectors as to the seaworthiness of the vessel, proper condition of the steam machinery, suitable accommodations for the passengers, &c., &c., which they are required to deliver to that officer by 49 of the act.

It is not charged that the proper certificate as prescribed by the act had not been given by the inspectors; and if it had been, we are not sure that it would have helped the case; as we have not been able to find any provision in the act making this the special duty of the owner. Unless the inspection has been made, and certificate given, the Collector is required to withhold the license, registry and enrollment, and the vessel is deprived of her American character, and all the rights and privileges belonging to it. Congress may have thought this a sufficient security that the owner would see to the procuring of the certificate. But be this as it may, the charge here is not for omitting to procure the certificate of the Inspector, but for omitting to obtain from the Collector a certified copy of it.

Now the only provision on this subject is found in section 25 of the act. That requires that the Collector shall keep on file the original certificate delivered to him by the inspectors, and shall give to the master or owner two certified copies thereof, one of which shall be placed in some conspicuous part of the vessel, where it may be seen by the passengers, and kept there at all times; the other to be retained by such master or owner as evidence of the authority thereby conferred; and then provides, "And if any person shall receive or carry any passengers on board any such steamer, not having a certified copy of the certificate of approval as required by this act placed and kept as aforesaid"—he "shall forfeit and pay for each offence $100, to be recovered by action of debt in any Court of competent jurisdiction."

Now, the argument on behalf of the Government is, that the omission to obtain this certified copy of the certificate as required, is a noncompliance with the terms of the act within the words of sec. 1, and the owner and vessel itself, therefore, are subject to the penalty in the 2d sec. of the act amended, which is $500.

But the obvious answer is that, as respects this particular noncompliance, the omission to obtain a certified copy of the certificate, the twenty-fifth section, which imposes the duty, prescribes the penalty, and limits it to $100 for each offence, to be recovered in an action of debt; and having thus specifically prescribed the penalty and mode of recovery, it necessarily takes the case out of the general description given in the first section. The argument would carry us the length of inflicting both penalties for the particular noncompliance with the act complained of.

We have been more particular in stating the grounds of our decision, as we understand several cases are pending, involving the same question, under the act of 1852.

The decree of the Court below was reversed by Judge Nelson dismissing the libel, and decreeing costs for the Claimant, Mr. Rodgers.

CALL OF THE CALENDAR—REPAULY.

Two defendants were then called and the following cases were disposed of:

James E. Davis, libelant and appellee, vs. The Schooner Ann, appellant.—On the opening for the defendants and appellants in this case, the libelant took a decree, affirming the decree of the Court below.

For appellee, Mr. Dodge.

Benjamin Savage, libelant and appellee, vs. Edward A. Joy, et al., appellants.—No one appeared for the appellants in this case, and the libel decree was affirmed as in the former case.

For libelant, Messrs. Betts and Donohue.

COLLISION.

Peter Forsyth, libelant and appellant, vs. The Norwich and New-London Steamboat Company, appellees.—The libel in this case was filed to recover damages sustained by the schooner Venice, owned by the libelant, by a collision with the steamboat Worcester, owned by the respondents, on the 15th of March, 1850, off Fort 1., East River. The cause was tried before Judge Betts, in the District Court, who thought that the Worcester was not in fault, and gave a decree in favor of the respondents. The libelant thereupon brought this appeal. The papers being read and the arguments of the appellant heard, Judge Nelson affirmed the decree in the Court below. For appellant, Mr. Morton and Mr. Hooker; for appellees, Mr. J. W. G. Leveridge.

Decision in Admiralty.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.—MAY 14.

Before Judge Inglesall.

MATERIALS—LIEN.

Edwin R. Kirk vs. The Steamboat John Adams.—This was a libel filed against the steamboat to recover for supplies and materials furnished to her by the libellant.

The boat was built in New-Jersey, under a contract with Wilson Small, of this City, who had agreed with the People's Ferry Company of Massachusetts, to furnish three boats to them. After being built she was brought to this City, when those materials were furnished by the libelant, as it appeared, on the order of the agent of the Ferry Company, the claimants.

The Court therefore gave a decree in favor of the libelant, with a reference.

For libelant, Mr. McMahon. For claimants, Mr. Dunning.

MAY 15.—The panel of Grand Jurors was called this morning, and the following gentlemen were empanelled: JOHN S. BUSSING, Wm. E. Barnes, Wm McArthur, Foreman, Charles Carville, Alex Rankin, Joseph Applegate, Saml. S. Constant, Albert Smith, Gerard T. Beekman, Wm. P. Emmet, Henry Spafford, John C. Baxter, Benjamin Ellis, Joseph Thompson, Wm. A. Burtis, Jr. Leon'd L. Johnson, Elisha Troughton.

The Jury having been sworn were charged by Judge Ingersoll, who told them that they must be satisfied before bringing in any bill, that the evidence before them, if uncontradicted, was sufficient to warrant a verdict of guilty, and that if any questions of law should arise, they should confer with the District Attorney, their appointed adviser.

The Grand Jury then retired.

The Court then took up the case of Joseph Beers et. al. vs. the steamboat John Adams. This libel was filed by the assignee of Messrs Crawford and Terry, against the steamboat, to recover for work, labor and materials furnished in building the boat in the State of New-Jersey, under a contract with Wilson Small of this City.

The claimants, the People's Ferry Company, a corporation in Massachusetts, claim that the libelants are not entitled to recover, because they had no lien under the contract which could be enforced in a Court of Admiralty, and no lien under the general maritime law, that being builders, and no lien under any local law of New-Jersey.

For libelants, Messrs. Benedict, Scoville and Benedict. For claimants, Mr. O'Conor, Mr. Dunning and Mr. Marbury.

Colonel Kinney Again.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL'S OFFICE.

WYNKOOP, United States Marshal for Pennsylvania, arrived in this City on Monday with a warrant for the arrest of Col. KINNEY for a violation of the Neutrality laws of the United States in that City of Brotherly Love. We understand that Col. KINNEY left yesterday morning to surrender himself.

THE FEVERELLY ARSON CASE.

New Trial Granted—Definition of the Word "Adjoining."

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

The People vs. Peverelly.—This case was argued before the General Term on Feb. 21 last, on an appeal from the judgment of the Court of General Sessions, rendered in November, 1854, against Peverelly, for an attempt to commit arson in the second degree. The points of the case were at that time fully reported in the TIMES. Yesterday a decision was given in the case, allowing a new trial. Two opinions were rendered—one by Hon. Justice Mitchell, and one by Hon. Justice Clerke. We give very brief abstracts:

MITCHELL, J.—The act under which the defendant was indicted, provides that any one who shall willfully set fire or burn in the night time any building, not being the subject of arson in the first degree, but adjoining to or within the curtilage of any inhabited dwelling house, so that such house shall be endangered by such firing, shall be guilty of arson in the second degree. In this case the buildings did not touch, neither were it within the curtilage of any other house, though it was in a block where there were several other houses, not more than ten or twenty feet from the store. If the construction which the Judge at the Sessions adopted was right, then the sentence would read, that "the person who should be guilty of setting on fire a building so adjoining to, or within the curtilage of any inhabited dwelling-house, so that such house should be endangered by the fire," &c. Here the "so" must qualify the term "within the curtilage," as well as the term "adjoining." If the prisoner should set fire to a store in such a manner that he endangered an inhabited dwelling-house adjoining the store fired, then he was to be deemed guilty. But, if he set fire to the store in such manner that the adjoining dwellings were not in danger by such fire, then he was not guilty. (R. S., 667, 510.) If two buildings join each other they must actually be joined. The word "joined" refers to the partitions, and not to the uses to which they are applied. The offence of the defendant in this case is so great that it is quite natural that an effort should be made to bring him within the section under which he is convicted; but the Court is not at liberty to go beyond the fair meaning of the Legislature in a highly penal statute. A new trial should be granted.

CLERKE, J., first states that the principal question in the case depends upon the legal signification of the term "adjoining." He then proceeds to give the etymology of the word, stating, however, that the popular or even technical meaning of words would be an uncertain guide, on account of their modern acceptation having often widely changed from their former meaning. Take the word "prevent" as an example: its derivative meaning was "to go before." Mr. Crabbe, in his English Synonymes classifies together "adjacent," "adjoining," and "contiguous," and after giving the etymology of these words, illustrates the difference between them in the following manner: What is adjacent may be separated by the intervention of some object. They have been heating up for volunteers in New-York and the towns adjacent, but nobody will enlist.—Greenville. What is adjoining must touch in some part. He happens to be seated in adjoining seats, in his own. What is contiguous must be fitted to touch entirely on one side. Lands are adjacent to a house or town; fields are adjoining to each other; houses are contiguous to each other.

His Honor quotes the same statute cited in the opinion of Judge Morris, and adds: it would be impossible in a city to limit the distance in which any house may not be endangered when any other building in it is on fire. The danger would depend upon the combustibleness of the houses, the propitiations of the incendiary, the state of the weather, and the means of suppressing the original fire, or of arresting its progress. I am of the opinion that the Court below erred in its charge to the Jury on this point, and that a new trial should be granted.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.—MAY 15.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

Nothing especial in this Court yet, though we are promised some big cases shortly. Burglary, larceny, assault and battery, and the smaller order of offences engage the attention of Jurors, and make temporary orators of the small lawyers. The first case yesterday was one of

ASSAULT AND BATTERY.

David Minzenheiser was charged with beating, maltreating, and assaulting with a dangerous weapon, one Newman Leopold, on the evening of Aug. 4, 1854, opposite No. 141 Ninth-street, the residence of the said Leopold. The complainant stated that he had caused the arrest of a workman of Minzenheiser's for stealing a canary bird, and that coming home on the night in question, he was attacked by this man and beaten severely. He defended himself briskly, however, and Minzenheiser came up to his workman's assistance. Complainant was accompanied by his father—an old man—who was also beaten. Minzenheiser had a pointed weapon, with which he dealt wounds, which needed a doctor to rectify. The evidence called by prosecution and defence was contradictory—witnesses refusing each other.

Mr. Jonas B. Phillips defended Minzenheiser very ably, and brought him off triumphantly; the Jury acquitting him after a few minutes' consultation.

GRAND LARCENY.

John Sheridan, a smart looking boy, was tried for stealing three silver table spoons, nine silver teaspoons, and four plated forks, valued at $30, the property of Mr. Joseph Watkins.

Ann Brennan, servant to Mr. Watkins, opened the basement door to admit a lad with groceries. The boy Sheridan, watching his opportunity, slipped in at the open door and stole the spoons and forks from a table in the front basement. The servant Brennan heard a noise, and got to the door in time to see the thief making his escape. She chased him, crying "Stop thief," until he was stopped by a man named John Kenney, when he threw the spoons into an open lot, where they were picked up by the servant.

☞ The boy was undefended. There were two other indictments against him, each for grand larceny. He was a diminutive boy, with an old face. His age, he said, was 16 years. The Recorder said he had been a wicked fellow for a long time, and sentenced him to the State Prison for two years.

BURGLARY IN THE SECOND DEGREE.

Henry W. Peckham was indicted for breaking into the house of Andrew Parker, one Christopher Hood, Yorkville, in April last, and stealing therefrom, with just opposite the Yorkville Hotel. The complainant was asleep in his room. He demanded of the intruder what he was about, when he replied that he had deserted with great haste. Complainant sprang out of bed and seized the burglar, who struggled hard to get into the hall, but Mr. Parker drew down stairs, gave an alarm and the chief of the band. They found the prisoner between the two houses, and he was taken off to jail. They hunched at a neighbouring door, and upon being admitted by him, they found in his bed, between the sheets, a sling and the necessary, some burglars' tools and skeleton keys. The Jury found the prisoner guilty.

LONG ISLAND.

The Liquor Traffic in Brooklyn.

The Brooklyn Police were very active on Saturday and Monday in carrying out Mayor HALL's order relative to the liquor dealers. A large number of warrants have been issued, and some of the liquor dealers who sold on Saturday, will be arrested and brought for a hearing this day. It is understood that they intend to waive the preliminary examination, and carry their cases to one of the higher Courts, where, if convicted, they intend to go far enough to test the law.

About thirty persons were brought before Justice BLACKLEY, at the Third District Station-house, Brooklyn, yesterday, charged with violating the Sunday law against liquor selling, previous to the 1st of May. A majority of the accused waived examination, and gave bail to appear to answer before a higher Court. Several pleaded guilty, and sentence was suspended for the present.

The Kings County Liquor Dealers' Association hold daily meetings, and great exertions have been put forward to have every dealer in the County join them, but with rather poor success, as up to Saturday night they had only 491 names. A great many persons have lost money by embarking in former organizations without any gain whatever to themselves, and they consequently look with suspicion upon the present affair, which is a large one.

The Liquor Traffic in Brooklyn—First Proceedings.

A number of liquor dealers, against whom complaints had been made by policemen for selling liquor on Saturday last, the 12th inst., were brought up yesterday evening before the City Court, on warrants issued by ERASTUS D. CULVER, Esq., as Judge of that Court.

Messrs. LOTT, KING, HAMILTON, HADDEN and MONZIE, appeared as counsel for defendants, and JOHN WINSLOW, Esq., Corporation Attorney, appeared for the prosecution.

Counsel proposed to waive an examination, and give bail for appearance of defendants before the Court of Sessions, if the Grand Jury found indictments.

The Court thought that this was one of that class of cases that should be examined at once, and ordered that the examination of witnesses be proceeded with.

Counsel contended that defendants had a right to waive an examination and give bail; to which answer was made, that it was within the province of the Court to order an examination, and that should be done in these cases.

Mr. HADDEN then raised the question of jurisdiction, and urged that the City Judge had no jurisdiction. The Court decided that full powers had been granted in the act of 1849, extending the powers of the Court. The examination of witnesses was then proceeded with.

The first case called was that of PATRICK CAHAN. Officer MATTHEWS, of the First District Police, testified that defendant kept a liquor store on the northwest corner of Pearl and York streets; that on Saturday evening last he saw defendant's barkeeper sell brandy, gin and beer, and receive pay for the same. The liquor was sold in small quantities, but was not drank on the premises. One other witness swore to a similar state of facts, when defendant was directed to stand up by the Court, when his counsel directed him not to answer any questions, as nothing he could say would be in his favor, and might be adduced against him. No questions were asked.

The case of EZEKIEL BALDWIN, keeper of the Franklin House, No. 15 Fulton-street, was next called, and the same ceremony was gone through with. In this case, the bar-tender was placed on the stand as a witness on behalf of the people. He was instructed by defendant's counsel not to answer any question that might tend to criminate himself; and he accordingly refused to answer when asked if he sold liquor on Saturday last at defendant's bar, and was sustained by the Court, who considered the employé or agent as liable to prosecution in the premises.

Counsel proposed that defendants should be in Court on Saturday next, at 1 o'clock P. M., to which time the Court adjourned, when the liquor cases will be proceeded with.

Riot and Resisting a Legal Process.

Nine men, named Peter Kelly, James Ward, Robert Collins, Adam Gwynne, Charles Lothrop, Luke Doyle, George Marion, George Edgecombe and John Sutton, indicted by the recent Grand Jury in Kings County for riot and resisting a legal process, appeared on Monday and gave bail in the sum of $1,500, each to appear for trial when wanted. These are the parties who some weeks since, ejected by force several of the Sheriff's Deputies from a factory on Red Hook Point, Brooklyn, of which they were placed in charge, and severely beat Deputy Sheriff HEGEMAN.

The Swine Nuisance.

The Authorities of Brooklyn have adopted an ordinance prohibiting the keeping of swine or goats within the limits of the consolidated city, unless licensed by the Mayor, and these licenses are to be recorded in the City Clerk's office. License will only be granted, we understand, to those persons residing on farm lands in the outskirts of the city.

Fatal Accident.

A boy 9 years of age, named BARNEY HOFFMAN, residing at No. 25 State-street, South Brooklyn, fell into a vat of hot swill at a distillery in State-street, on Monday morning, and was so severely scalded that he died in great agony soon after being removed. Coroner REDDING held an inquest.

Church Dedication.

A building recently erected in East New-York, by the society known as the Reformed Protestant Church, was dedicated on Sunday last by appropriate exercises. Rev. Dr. BETHUNE, of Brooklyn, preached the Dedicatory Sermon.

Assistant Captains of Police.

NICHOLAS BENNET and ISAAC VAN KEUREN have been elected as Assistant Captains of the Second District Police, Brooklyn.

☞ The Kings County Board of Supervisors held a meeting yesterday afternoon, but the business transacted is of no general interest.

☞ JOHN WINSLOW, Esq., late Assistant District Attorney, has received the appointment of Corporation Attorney in Brooklyn.

KINGS CO. COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Henry A. Moore, Judge, and Justices Stryker and Emmons.

Tuesday, May 15—Fourth Day.

EVIDENCE OF CAPTAIN PERRY.

James H. Perry: Was a special Deputy of this County from July last year till after election; I was Captain of the Special Deputies in Williamburg; there were arrangements made for keeping the peace at the polls; it was, that in case of any disturbance, a report should be sent to the Odeon as their head-quarters; about nine o'clock a report did come, and I went with about eight to the polls in the Second Ward (Nov. 14). They remained there about an hour and a half and then reported to me all was quiet; about eleven o'clock received some more information from Lieut. Thayer; I gave directions to have my men withdrawn from that Ward to the Odeon to have them organized; I went then to the Fifteenth to tell the Lieutenant to send his men to me; when I got to the Fifteenth Ward the bell struck, and I went back to the Odeon; when I got there my men were all gone down to the place of riot, but when I got there it was all over; there were thirty-five or forty deputies on duty; they were armed with clubs, and carried a star on their coat-lappels as their badge; I was acting under Sheriff Lott's instructions; I had no special directions, merely general ones to keep the peace.

The witness was not cross-examined.

John A. Phillips, of No. 41 North Sixth-street, was called, but could state nothing as to the period of the day covered by this indictment.

W. C. Allen, carpenter, was present at the polls in the afternoon; went when he heard the bell ring; was at that time on the corner of Grand and Second streets; met the crowd on the corner of North Third and Second; they were running; saw one deputy running ahead of the crowd, and about thirty or forty after him; he could not identify any one; when he got to the polls he saw Patrick Cooney, Nolan, Doyle. (Doyle is not on trial.) Didn't see Cooney do anything, or have any weapon; I saw him on the corner of North Sixth and Second streets; Nolan had a club, which he flourished around; he talked a good deal about fighting; heard him say, "Go into 'em and knock 'em down."

Cross-examined—When he said that he addressed himself to a crowd on the corner of North Sixth-street that he was with.

Joseph A. Wiggins, a school teacher: First went to the polls about thirty-five minutes past one; started from home, No. 183 South-street; I was attending to the school; my poll was at the Odeon; saw nothing particular to arrest my attention till I got opposite the Fourteenth Ward; the first thing he heard was [illegible] and a spade; saw Robert Lee in the Chery and saw him parade; there were some of those who were being chased and those who chased them; thought Lee had a gun, broken off at the handle; the cry was, "Wolve, wolve!" Number Eleven, Chief Engineer, passed; I heard Lee cried out to Number Eleven, with a gun; he carried his club over his head; also, saw Mr. Quado there with a club of some kind; I saw a man with a club; he chased people down Second-street; also saw John Powers with a club of some kind; he started from the polls; I understand he was in the chasing crowd; I don't remember any one; I did not see a body of men coming down North Sixth street; I did not observe any persons over exception of clubs except staves and hoop poles; I saw clubs thrown out of the window; I do not recognize Fagan.

Cross-examined—Did not know any of the prisoners at all by name at that time, nor recognize them before; had never seen them; some small men chased; guess there about 300 persons there not engaged in the affray; saw McQuade in the effort to strike the people he was chasing; this was at the junction of Second and North Sixth streets; saw McQuade come back from the chase, and saw him fall in the fence; my sight is very good at a distance; I can see as well at five miles, and from two rods to five miles, as well as ever; have worn glasses to assist my vision for twelve years; in consequence of the fattening of the lenses I am forced to use artificial ones; Pepper first drew my attention by being engaged in the run; I do not belong to any secret society, or to any society except the Quakers; the man who had the broken sword had a red shirt on; I recognize him now and can name he's the man; Sandford B. Allen was there immediately after dinner; I was talking on the south side of North Sixth-street; the first thing he heard was, there seemed to be a considerable rush and some one hallooed "Clear the polls." The witness described generally the affray as others had done; he did not recognize any one here as those who tore the boards off the fence; he recognized Cooney, O'Neil, Burke, Lee and John Lyons; identified Reed, but did not know him by name, also John Nolan; saw Nolan with an arm full of staves; saw him throw them down and flourish one; saw Cooney standing in Sixth-street right in front of me; did not see him doing any thing; heard two pistols; I said "I would shoot the first d——d Yankee son of a b——h that would lay their hands on me;" he said also they had struck him and what could he do but defend himself; he said that in reply to a man who addressed him to put his pistols up; saw O'Neil near the polls at the time the difficulty commenced; saw him doing nothing; he had no weapons; saw Lyons in Sixth-street; he had a bit of stick about eighteen inches or two feet long and a quarter of an inch thick; he was moving round with the crowd; saw Burke before the fight in his shirtsleeves; his brother and Brabley were taking him home; he had taken "too much steam;" I can't recollect that I saw Robert Lee doing anything; did not see him have a stick; did not see Reed during the fight, but saw him before and after; he was excitedly talking about the polls; saw Oliver Lee there; he had a piece of board.

Cross-examined—Was not a voter at those polls; went to see if he could not help Mr. Aymar to a few votes; spoke to two or three just before the fight began; to a Mr. Lilies; I think to Mr. Flaherty; I don't belong to any party; I vote for all parties; I had drank twice; I decline answering whether I have ever been in the Penitentiary; Robert Lee was not the man that had the shovel, and I don't think he was among those who tore down the fence; some call Lee "Red Dick;" he is not the man that I know as "Red Dick;" at the time the Deputies came up, there was not any more than the noise usual at election polls.

Geo. Hartley: Went there directly after the bell rang; saw O'Neil strike a man that works for Hoyt, the pump maker; saw him near the polls; had seen him before but did not know his name; as quick as he struck, the young man whom he struck turned round and struck him with a club and he fell; O'Neil hit him from behind on the shoulder; the man had a deputy's club; saw another fellow there who used to be "around Ten's house;" saw they were fighting and I went home.

Cross-examined—I don't live in the Sixteenth Ward; the bell brought me out; I am not sure whether O'Neil had anything in his hands.

Isaac Smith says: I live at North Sixth-street; saw the scene at the polls; I voted at that poll; went there for the third time about one o'clock; saw a crowd charging a lot of deputies; ten to twelve deputies were there; there was a crowd of about four hundred; no one in the crowd that I knew; I saw three or four men knocked down; I heard the crowd shout "Kill 'em;" that was a general cry.

Benjamin Wilson: Was at the riot; I can't recognize any of the parties engaged.

Adjourned till this morning.

NEW-JERSEY.

Jersey City Election Case.

Argument was heard on Monday in the Hudson County Circuit Court, before Judge HAINES, relative to the rejection of the 190 ballots headed D. S. MANNERS, for Mayor, upon which Pound master was misspelled, in the Jersey City Election. I. W. SCUDDER and A. O. ZABRISKIE spoke in favor of those ballots being allowed, and Wm. H. JELLIFFE defended the acts of the Judges of the Election in rejecting them, as defective ballots. The decision has not yet been given.

The Arrest of Baker.

Lewis Baker, charged with the murder of Bill Poole, was brought to this port yesterday by the bark Grapeshot, which had been dispatched to the Canary Islands to intercept him if he should be on board the brig Isabella Jewett. The greatest excitement prevailed throughout the City as soon as the rumor of the arrival was noised abroad. The faithlessness of the great majority, upon the sailing of the Grapeshot, will be remembered, and many eulogies were pronounced upon Judge Stuart, through whose energy and zeal for justice the arrest has been effected. When the bark was leaving port, we made ample arrangements for a full and detailed account of the cruise and the capture. This account we publish this morning, and on perusal it will be found to possess extraordinary interest.

Poor England.

The recent visit of the Imperial Majesty of France to the Royal Majesty of England, has called forth much comment, chiefly turning on the object flunkeyism displayed by the English. But there is one point in the significance of this spectacle which we have not seen made the subject of distinct notice. It is in the virtual repudiation, for so we may almost call it, of the Napoleonic dynasty. It is in the contrast between the haughty refusal of the British Government in 1815, to see or admit the existence of a Napoleon I., or of an Emperor Napoleon, or of anything but a General Bonaparte,—and the crouching acknowledgment of the Emperor Napoleon III. in 1855.

It was humiliating enough that reasons of State should force upon the poor Queen the necessity of giving a State reception to the Imperial personage; and the adulations of the English flunkeys, high and low, who assisted at the orgies, were a gratuitous addition to the humiliation of the scene. This is the aspect of the affair, even if nothing be taken into account beyond the mere individual antecedents of Louis Napoleon himself—his own personal character and career. But considered as something very nearly tantamount to a recognition of the Napoleonic dynasty, forced by the astute adventurer upon the old haughty foe and contemner of his house—it makes the measure of British humiliation complete. In what quality has Louis Napoleon been just received? Was it merely as the person de facto sovereign of France, or head of the French Government, with whom it was therefore necessary for the British Government to maintain political and diplomatic relations, without thereby compromising or committing itself on the matter of de jure, of legitimacy, or on any grounds it had taken in the past? Much more than this is involved in the recent state pageant—much more, so far as the gratification of the pride of Louis Napoleon, and the humiliation of the pride of England is concerned. The style of the French sovereign is Napoleon III—that is the title he arrogates, and that implies a Napoleon II. and a Napoleon I. By the bold, proud assumption of this title, Louis Napoleon poured contempt on the Holy Alliance, of which England was the life, the soul, the head—trampled on its victories, treaties, restorations, legitimacies, on all its doings and attempts. And now he has been—not merely treated with, as the de facto head of the French Government, but—personally received by the British sovereign as Napoleon III., with a tacit recognition of all that the arrogation of the title implies. Shades of Pitt and Castlereagh! How the scene must have looked to them! One must imagine their very bones stirred in their coffins as the State procession passed along the streets. One of the things that rankled most bitterly in the heart of Napoleon the First, was the haughty refusal of the British Government to give the Alien monarch his title and observance as Emperor, its obstinate persistence in its orders that he should be always punctilliously styled and treated as General Bonaparte. Well has the Nephew avenged the indignity put upon the Uncle—and doubtless with a deep and fierce gratification, none the less deep and fierce for being hidden beneath the veil of his impassible countenance.

Every way then, both in the significance of this visit in itself and in all its circumstances, and in the disgraceful display of English flunkeyism, Louis Napoleon has gained a triumph. He has dragged down to the dust the pride of England and put his foot upon it.

And now they say he is going to the Crimea in person. If so, with the sanction of the British Government—a sanction that would never have been given, we think, if it could have been well withheld. This is another humiliation for England. And if he should actually go, we anger yet further humiliations. At any rate, we venture to predict it will not redound to the glory or advantage of England.

Poor England! Fallen from her old proud position of arbiter of Europe—playing second at the back of the French adventurer—covered with disgrace by her imbecile conduct of the war—staggering under a load of debt scarcely tolerable now and increasing frightfully every day—she is nearing a crisis in her fate. No right hearted American but must feel a true pitying concern for her. Surely spite of shams and shows, and red tape imbecilities, and flunkeyisms, there must be still at the centre the great strong wise English heart not yet dead—clogged and oppressed, but still sound; and one must hope that the energies of life may yet be roused to throw off these suffocating bonds.

Who shall be Governor?

Ex-Senator Salmon P. Chase desires to be Governor of Ohio; and—notwithstanding he voted with the Cincinnati Know-Nothings last Fall, and has been opposed, in party organization, to the old line Democracy of his State for several years past—an effort is making to secure his nomination and election by a fusion between the Free-Soil Democrats and the old liners. It must be confessed that the prospects of the ex-Senator's success are not very flattering thus far. He might perhaps get the nomination if he would only profess to be what he is, an out-an-out Loco-Foco (we use the term in contradistinction to true Democracy,) in all respects save his devotion to Free-Soilism.

But a nomination on such terms would scarcely be deemed an election; and so we are inclined to believe Mr. Chase will not be Governor immediately. Although true to the cause of Freedom, he is not the only true man: and it is exceedingly doubtful whether Ohio could find within her borders one, who, possessing so much ability as does Mr. Chase, has so little of tact and effective power. As a Propagandist of Anti-Slavery doctrine, he probably has few superiors; but he seems to be devoid of the most essential qualities of the effective legislator or statesman. He can scarcely expect the united support of the Whigs of Ohio, when known to be so uncompromisingly hostile to every Whig measure and all whig policy. And even those Democrats who are disposed to make the position of their candidate on the Slavery question the first consideration, will prefer voting for one who is as able and true on that issue, and at the same time can accomplish something for the State outside of the Fugitive Slave Act. If Ohio has no such man, she can do no better than elevate Mr. Chase; and if Whigs can find in their own ranks no one as worthy of elevation, as likely to prove true to freedom, and less likely to gauge his action in all other questions by the strictest rules of Loco-Foco illiberalism, they certainly might make a worse choice. It will be strange, however, if among their many brilliant men they can find none more worthy to bear their standard than one who is willing to share his bed with the Medarys.

Priesthood in Sardinia.

We have never agreed with the Liberals of Europe in their feeling towards the Sardinian Government. On that subject, we are constrained to differ with some whose opinions on most matters of European policy seem to us most wise and true. It is natural, that those who have lost everything in the struggle with kings, and to whom crowned heads have been the symbol of oppression and injustice, should hate all who bear the name. But to us, who look on at a distance and who regard these various struggles practically, the great question is, not what is abstractly the best Government, but what is the best possible form. We would rather have an Italian Republic, but not seeing any immediate probability of it, we say "Give us an enlightened, liberal monarchy with a Constitution in North Italy—it is one great step."

And such we think events show that we have in Piedmont and Sardinia. Whatever be the personal qualities of the king, certainly the course of the Government ever since 1848, has been towards Liberalism. This struggle which the people are carrying on against the ecclesiastical authority of Rome, shows well for the country. To enlighten our readers on this we append a few statistics in regard to the Sardinian Priesthood gathered from a Swiss Journal, the Bund.

There are in the Kingdom of Piedmont, exclusive of the island of Sardinia, 25,000 priests to a population of 4,368,136 souls, or about one priest to every 174 of the inhabitants; while in France, the proportion is 1 to every 750, and in Austria 1 to every 610. France has for its 30 million Catholics, 15 Archbishops and 65 Bishops. Piedmont has for its four and a half million Catholics, 4 Archbishops and 26 Bishops. Beside Bishops and priests, &c., Piedmont has an immense number of spiritual corporations of both sexes, and of all possible orders; among these are more than 2,000 begging monks, whose superintendents reside in Rome and who direct their movements, without the control of Government. This clergy is exceedingly rich. The landed estate of all Piedmont yields 924 million francs; of these, 16 millions fall to the priests, making them in proportion to their number three times richer than the laity and five times richer than the clergy of France. The Archbishop of Vercelli has alone an income of 116,000 francs, while all the Bishops of Belgium only receive 115,000 francs. Seventy different orders contain, within more than 600 cloisters, 5,000 male and 3,000 female members. Their incomes amount to 9,300,000 francs.

The law which has recently been laid before the Chambers by Natazzi, Minister of Justice, will dissolve every one of these cloisters and corporations, except those which are devoted to the education of the people and the care of the sick. Their property will be placed under the administration of the State, and the incomes will be applied first to life pensions for the priests and nuns, and then to the improvement of the salaries of poor clergymen and curates. The rest of the property of the clergy, and of the kindred and corporations, will not at once be taken into the hands of the State, but simply be made taxable.

Such a law—and its passage our last news announces near—will, essentially clip the power of Rome in Piedmont. It is the first great step to a more thorough Reformation. Let the Romish clergy be poor, and their influence merely rest on their morale; and we do not fear for the struggle of ideas in Northern Italy. That active, ingenious people in Genoa and Turin will soon work out the true from the mixtures of false. If we are not mistaken, marriage has already been made a civil contract in Sardinia. There are no longer ecclesiastical courts—new schools are being started, and, step by step, the nation is freeing itself from the rule of superstition and ignorance. Even if the Government of this little State be a Monarchy, we bid success to such efforts! They may be the healthful germ of a grand movement in Italy. We think they are the results of the little Protestantism—the pure faith of the Waldenses—working among the people.

The power and the future hope of Italy, we believe, lie in the North. Piedmont, Sardinia, Lombardy, Tuscany and Venice, must lead the regenerated Italian nation.

How at length will the world rejoice when Genoa, the superb and the regal Venice and beautiful Florence, and those cities sacred to beauty and art, now blood-stained and trampled, shall take upon themselves again the old glorious crowns of the Italian Republics! There are rich lands and treasures, and noble men yet in Italy. She only waits for Freedom; and as a first step to it, shall we not hail this vigorous opposition of Sardinia to priestly encroachment?

Marcoleta's Fillibustering.

The article from the Evening Post, which we append, explains the new movement of Señor Marcoleta and Counsellor White against Col. Kinney and his expedition; and our telegraphic columns will inform the reader of the proceedings had in the case yesterday at Philadelphia. It is perhaps too soon to judge correctly of the probable result of this last scheme of the Nicaragua Minister and his associates; but at first sight these new proceedings certainly bear much the aspect of malicious persecution. One Court, in the District where Kinney's offence, if any, was committed, has released him; and yet a foreign adventurer, aided by the speculating Attorney of a speculating Company which fears the establishment of a rival to its monopoly, are permitted to go into another Court, in another District, and obtain a new indictment upon the same charge, as the facts are now understood. It looks very much as though the prosecuting parties are determined to harass the life out of the Kinney enterprise, knowing full well that they cannot reach it by direct and more honorable means. If it is true that the Attorney General is lending his sanction to such a proceeding, the fact does him very little credit.

Col. Kinney in Trouble Again.

From the Evening Post.

The afflictions of the Kinney expedition have not even yet come to an end. After Judge Ingersoll's discharge of the Colonel, it was expected, we suppose, that he and his friends would depart with flying colours, and the steamship United States was accordingly advertised for San Juan "positively" on the 10th. But dies alter visum. Such was not the programme of the United States Attorney General or Mr. Marcoleta.

Although the alleged offence was committed in the port of New-York, where the Colonel is staying, yet, in view of Judge Ingersoll's impracticability, Mr. Cushing is reported to have obtained an indictment of Col. Kinney in the United States District Court at Philadelphia, and a warrant for his arrest was brought from that city yesterday afternoon by M. C. Wynkoop, the Marshal of that District. He was anticipated, however, by the Colonel, who received a telegraphic dispatch in time to save his pursuers the trouble of arresting him; and early this morning repaired to Philadelphia, where by this time he has probably presented himself in Court before Judge Kane to demand the reason of the prosecution.

We are informed that George M. Dallas has been retained by him as counsel, J. C. Van Dyke, the United States District Attorney, appearing for the prosecution.

As long ago as Saturday last it was known in this City that proceedings were to be renewed in this matter, though it was not suspected that resort would be had to the Courts of Philadelphia. Perhaps the cause of this change is the fact that the Irishman O'Brien, one of the two "material witnesses" whose absence gave Mr. McKeon such trouble, has turned up in that vicinity. The other one, "—Kerrigan," as it is written in the affidavit of our own District Attorney, is said now to be "four seas over," and beyond the jurisdiction of our Government.

The testimony of O'Brien, so far as we can ascertain, amounts to this—that the Colonel, when engaged with Senator Cooper and Cost Johnson in the now abandoned Mosquito expedition, had promised O'Brien some captaincy or other military position in the Mosquito army of occupation. It seems, therefore, though that enterprise, in obedience to Secretary Marcy's intimation, has been entirely relinquished, and the Colonel is connected with another set of associates, with a programme to which no objection has been taken, that the present expedition must suffer for the sins of its predecessor.

We ought, however, in saying that no objection has been urged to the present scheme of Nicaraguan colonization, to make some important exceptions. Mr. Clayton claims he has always professed a strong reverence for the provision in the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, forbidding the colonization, by this Government, of any part of Central America, and, in his late proceedings, acts on the assumption that the Kinney emigration would be the act of Government.

Such is also the view taken by the Nicaragua Transit Company, whose objections to colonization are strengthened by their desire of retaining the monopoly of the navigation of the San Juan, near which the emigrants propose to settle.

In fact, it is asserted that Mr. White, the agent of this Company, has declared that he "has already broken up one expedition of Kinney's, and would break up this in the same way." Mr. Marcoleta, a gentleman of leisure in this City, is also indefatigable in his exertions to save the country of his adoption from the depredations of the "fillibusters," so that if Nicaragua and Kinney are not properly attended to, it will be for no want of influences at work for the purpose.

Meanwhile the administration, with the exception of Mr. Cushing, appears to look on the whole with a masterly inactivity and unconcern, prepared, if Kinney should find a happy issue out of all his afflictions, to rejoice in the extension of American enterprise and institutions over Central America; and, if his project should be suppressed, to announce it to the world as evidence of the Government's sensitive regard for the rights of a sister Republic, and its determination to crush even the semblance of fillibusterism. Notwithstanding all this, the story has not been disputed that gentlemen in official stations, very high in its confidence, had last Winter a direct pecuniary interest in the more objectionable Mosquito expedition; and if it be now engaged in strangling the present enterprise, the reason may be that the bantling comes of different parentage.

Macaulay and Kirke White.

In the Daily Times of yesterday, in the remarks on "Misplaced ideas," little more was done than correcting the Albion's mistake in attributing to Sydney Smith the paternity of an idea which Macaulay has made popular, but did not create. The originator of the picturesque passage was no doubt Henry Kirke White, but we think that Macaulay did not borrow from him but from Shelley, who it is clear had the lines of White in his mind. We shall trace the progress of the idea, or rather the progress of the wandering artist through the pages of English literature and into a popular reputation—thus commencing with what is generally conceded as his present "local habitation," and conveying him back to that home from which he was kidnapped.

In Macaulay's brilliant review of Ranke's Ec-

"She was great and powerful before the Saxon had set foot on Britain—before the Franks had passed the Rhine—when Grecian eloquence still flourished at Antioch—when idols were still worshipped in the temple of Mecca. And she may still exist in undiminished vigor when some traveler from New Zealand shall, in the midst of a vast solitude, take his stand on a broken arch of London Bridge to sketch the ruins of St. Paul's."

This was published in the Edinburgh Review October, 1840. So much for Macaulay. Now for Shelley.

In the dedication of Peter Bell the Third, by Miching Mallecho (Percy B. Shelley,) to Thomas Brown, Esq., the younger, (Tom Moore,) author of the Fudge Family, we have the following passage:

"Hoping that the immortality which you have given to the Fudges, you will receive from them, and in the firm expectation that when London shall be a habitation of bitterns, when St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey shall stand shapeless and nameless ruins, in the midst of an unpeopled marsh; when the piers of Waterloo Bridge shall become the nuclei of islets of reeds and osiers, and cast the jagged shadows of their broken arches on the solitary stream, some transatlantic commentator will be weighing in the scales of some new and now unimagined system of criticism, the respective merits of the Bells and Fudges, and their historians."

This is dated Dec. 1, 1819.

We give not only the parallel passages, but a little of their settings, so to speak, the more fully to confirm our belief that the reviewer fashioned his succinct picture from the more various details of Shelley's composition. In Macaulay we find the idea of Kirke White and the details of Shelley; because in the latter we have the idea and some of the details of White's passage, which we give.

In the series of poetic fragments entitled Time, and which was begun about 1803, and written on between that period and White's death, in 1806, we arrive at the birth-home of Macaulay's "Traveler from New-Zealand," Shelley's "Transatlantic Commentator," and Kirke White's "Bold Adventurer," all of whom are reducible to the same skeleton, in a variety of disguises, seeking the picturesque under some difficulties, and each persisting in the "ruin" of St. Paul's.

Reviewing the weakness of mortal man, who "idly reasons of eternity," ruminating on the fate of empires, of Rome,

"Living but in the tale of other times,"

and

"polished Greece become the seat
Of ignorance and sloth," &c.

the poet, pondering, like Marius amid the ruins, allows his mind to travel into the future; and seeing it, through the desolation of the past, his imagination bodies forth the time when Britain shall follow

"Cities numberless;
Tyre, Sydon, Carthage, Babylon and Troy,
And rich Phœnicia;"

and when

"Some second Vandal hath reduced her pride,
And with one big recoil hath thrown her back
To primitive barbarity.
* * * *
O'er her marts,
Her crowded ports, broods Silence; and the cry
Of the loud curlew, and the pensive dash
Of distant billows, breaks along the void;
*Even as the savage sits upon the stone
That marks where stood her capitols, and hears
The bittern booming in the woods*, he shrinks
From the dismaying solitude."

Thus far Kirke White's parental authority is undeniable; but if even it were slightly doubtful the annexed quotation on the decline of Albion, the growth of the arts elsewhere, and its effect, is conclusive evidence against Shelley and Macaulay:

"Meanwhile the Arts, in second infancy,
Rise in some distant clime, and then, perchance,
Some bold adventurer, fill'd with golden dreams,
Steering his bark through trackless solitudes,
Where, to his wandering thoughts, no daring prow
Hath ever plow'd before—espies the cliffs
Of fallen Albion. To that land unknown
He journeys joyful; and perhaps descries
Some vestige of her ancient greatness!
Then he with vain conjecture fills his mind
Of the unheard-of race, which had arrived
At science in that solitary nook,
Far from the civilized world; and sagely sighs,
And moralizes on the state of man."

Academy of Music.

A dreadfully long negotiation took place on Monday night, between the managers of the Academy troupe and that unhappy but "chosen" man, Mr. Jacobsohn, of the La Grange party. Nothing (precisely) was done in a properly diplomatic manner. The affairs of the two troupes have been tied up into so many knots by the indefatigable "gentleman who manages the press," that there is no unraveling them, and but very little probability, it seems, of a stray end protruding itself for shipwrecked Mr. Jacobsohn to hang on by. The latter, after a most exhaustive train of reasoning, succeeded in extorting a proposition from Mr. Phalen—the President of the Academy. It was that the Academy should take La Grange and the other artists now, and pay their future salaries, but pay nothing to Mr. Jacobsohn—not even the back expenses. Of course, such a proposition could not be entertained, and legal proceedings have been commenced. The "gentleman who manages the bar" will now have an opportunity to distinguish himself.

Yesterday the salaries of the artists were due, and with the elaborate punctuality of their kind, they presented their "little bills," but were politely requested to call again.

Dramatic.

Broadway Theater.—An excellent drama, called "Love and Loyalty," has been played here on the last two nights with unequivocal and deserved success. Its first performance introduced Mr. E. L. Davenport to the audience of this season. He was genially received, but forfeited a little of his popularity by not responding to a second call at the fall of the curtain. An intolerable habit has recently possessed the audiences of our theatres, to call for a speech from the unhappy gentleman who happen to be "starring" it. Mr. Davenport is entitled to much approbation for disregarding the silly custom.

"Love and Loyalty" derives its interest from a succession of good situations, figurative, well-written dialogue, and a plot easily perceived. The latter possesses no novelty, being simply an incident of the Protectorate. A cavalier falls in love with a Puritan's daughter. Insurmountable difficulties spring up in every act, but are nevertheless surmounted by the aid of spring doors, hired daggers, and sharp-eared listeners. Mr. Robson, the author, has displayed unusual ability in the use of very common-place material, and assisted by an exuberant pen has succeeded in producing a play which cannot fail to win the sympathies of an audience. There is much also for the critics's appreciation. Mr. Davenport, as the hero of the piece, displayed all that quiet mastery of his art for which he is already a favorite. In voice, gesture and attitude, he was at once a finished and satisfying artist. Miss Fanny Vining, in the passionate character of Julia Vermont, played with great force, verging towards the melo-dramatic, but discreetly so.

To-night Mr. Davenport and Miss Vining appear in Shakspeare's "Hamlet."

Wreck of the Ship Paulina.

The ship Paulina, of Bath, Colburn, from Philadelphia for Havana, went ashore on Elbow Cay, 25th ult., and was totally lost. The cargo of 400 tons coal sold for $13, as it lay. Captain C., officers and crew came home to this port in the bark Stanly, arrived yesterday from Nassau, N. P.

The Excitement about Colonel Kinney.

During yesterday great excitement prevailed in the City in regard to the attempt to frustrate Colonel Kinney in his expedition. Early in the morning U. S. Marshal Wynkoop, of the Eastern District, Pennsylvania, visited the Colonel's apartments at the Metropolitan Hotel, in company with Deputy U. S. Marshal De Angelis, but were informed he had left in the 6 o'clock A. M. train for the City of Philadelphia. Hence the Government officer was rid of the unpleasant duty of effecting the arrest, and expressed himself highly pleased to learn that Col. Kinney had anticipated him, and voluntarily proceeded to Philadelphia to answer before Judge Kane.

In the afternoon Marshal Wynkoop received a telegraphic dispatch from his officials at home confirming the statement of Col. Kinney having appeared in Court to meet any accusation made against him.

The Secretary, Henry Meigs, read a brief biography of Columella, one of the patriarchs of Agriculture, who flourished in Spain about 1600 years ago. To Columella is attributed the perfection of that breed of sheep known as the Spanish Merino. He wrote twelve books on Agriculture and Domestic Animals, in which he made quotations from many authors who lived before his time—thus showing that the subject of Agriculture was by no means neglected by the ancients.

DISCOVERY OF A GUANO ISLAND.

Mr. Benson, who was introduced to the Club for that purpose, stated that he had not long since been made aware of an important discovery, which, with proper management, would prove a great boon to American agriculture. A friend of his, a captain of a whaler, while on a recent voyage accidentally discovered an island remarkably rich in guano, and hitherto unknown. He was not, of course, prepared to tell its locality, but would say that it is not laid down on any chart; is over 400 miles from any land, in the southeast trades; crescent in shape, with a harbor capable of accommodating from one hundred to one hundred and fifty vessels, and containing at least two hundred millions tons of guano, which can be landed in this country at a cost, including freightage, of about $30 per ton. Mr. B. said he believed the Central Government should at once take steps to obtain possession of the island and protect such Americans as went there in their rights against outside encroachments. To secure this end he had written to Washington some days since, the facts of the case, but as yet received no reply. At all events, he and his partner in the affair (the sea captain) would, in about thirty days, dispatch a vessel to the island.

WIRE FENCES.

A specimen of wire fence manufactured by the Lowell (Mass.) Iron Fence Company was then submitted to the Club, and gave rise to some remarks. Professor Mapes and Messrs. Robinson and Stillman expressed the opinion, based on actual experience, that wire fences were entirely useless, unless so constructed and erected as to provide sufficiently for the expansion and contraction of the wires consequent on the changes of the seasons. Manufacturers of such fences had entirely neglected this important fact; and until they paid it the attention it deserved, wire fences would prove a failure and a nuisance.

AN INTERESTING SCENE.

One of the subjects for the day, "Roots," was then called up for consideration, whereupon an old and well known member of the American Institute, and a habitué of the Club, took the floor, and proceeded to speak on the subject under consideration. He had scarcely risen, however, before the older members of the Club began to betray an ominous uneasiness, which soon reached positive discontent; and, finally, many of the Club, including the Secretary, left their seats, retired to the further end of the room, and commenced an animated conversation in a stage whisper. The speaker, however, evidently used to such things, seemed in no wise disconcerted by this proceeding, for he continued to speak to the few listeners (but remained, and in a key sufficiently high to make himself heard above the clatter of the unappreciating group at the other end of the room. Finally, having said his say, he resumed his seat, as did also those who had left.

Mr. Robinson, thinking the subject of "Roots" had been sufficiently expatiated on, suggested the propriety of talking about grapes, whereupon the old and known member of the Institute, and habitué of the Club aforesaid, expressed his entire willingness to dilate on that subject also, "if the modern Solon was not very anxious to enlighten the Club."

This last effort caused Prof. Mapes, who had hitherto manifested an undisguised discontent, to start to his feet, and say that the Farmers' Club was instituted to afford mutual instruction to its members by the narration of facts. Some years since a certain gentleman, entirely regardless of this understanding, persisted in boring the members of the Club with the most stupid twaddle, coupled with personal invective, despite of several hints which he had received that his remarks were neither interesting nor instructive. He was at length prevailed on, by the united wish of the Club, to cease his nonsense and remain silent on subjects about which he knew nothing whatever, beyond what he learned from the perusal of books, which he was not competent to comprehend.

He was sorry to say, however, that the gentleman alluded to had neither the good sense nor good taste to continue silent; for he had again broken out, again and again interrupted the proceedings of the Club, until the nuisance became so unbearable that he (the Professor,) and other members agreed to vacate their seats and retire from the meeting whenever the gentleman aforesaid assumed to speak. He (the Professor,) had no time to waste; he came to the Club for information, and not to listen to an everlasting string of twaddle—a diarrhœa of words—from a man incapable either of giving or receiving information. He had no hard feelings towards the man, and in what he said he had but the good of the Club in view. At all events, he (the Professor,) positively would not remain in his seat to be bored by the meaningless remarks of the gentleman to whom he alluded.

The Professor's remarks were received with loud applause, and at their conclusion, the well known member, &c., arose, and said he knew the remarks of the Professor were meant for him, but they were false in every particular—a base slander.

Here he was interrupted by Mr. Solon Robinson, who moved that the Club adjourn. The motion was seconded by Mr. Meigs, the Secretary, and carried despite the loud and earnest entreaties of the well-known gentleman, &c., to be heard. If the meeting were cut short, the well-known gentleman, &c., determined it should not be, and he continued to speak for some time, directing his remarks especially to Mr. Robinson, whom he denounced in no choice terms, as a "villain," a "scoundrel," a "coward," and other things too impolite and numerous to mention. He even went so far as to say that he would pull Mr. Robinson's nose, if he thought he had manliness enough to resent it. Mr. Robinson bore the attack with great patience. The well-known gentleman, &c., finally cooled down, and the members of the Club who had looked on the "scene" with interest, separated more than half an hour before their usual time.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

A DISTINGUISHED MEMBER OF CONGRESS IN Indiana writes: "I am compelled to acknowledge that your FEVER AND AGUE PILLS have effected some decided cures. I gave them to friends who had shook with the Ague, and tested the quinine cure effectually, without procuring permanent relief; and in every instance they have not only broken up the disease, but also prevented its return. I have no doubt your Pills will do all that you claim for them." Sold by all dealers, and by O. D. DERRILER, Agent, at the Wholesale Dépôt, 521 Broadway, N. Y.

The above popular and successful remedy is sold at wholesale and retail by CHARLES H. RING, corner Broadway and John-st. Also by C. V. CLICKENER & CO., No. 81 Barclay-st.; STEPHEN PAUL & CO., No. 140 Chambers-st.; and F. C. WELLS & CO., No. 115 Franklin-st.

SAVE YOUR RECORDS.—AT THE RECENT FIRE in Vesey-st., two Safes but their books and papers, the property of RICH & CO.'S SALAMANDER SAFES, WILSON'S PATENT. For evidence see the following certificate: New-York, Wright, Esq., who had wisely provided himself with one. NEW-YORK, May 15, 1855.

MESSRS. STEARNS & MARVIN—GENTS: This morning our factory, located on Vesey-st., was burned to the ground, the fire destroying the three story building No. 48 Vesey-st., was entirely destroyed by fire.

On the second floor stood one of RICH & CO.'S SALAMANDER SAFES, WILSON'S PATENT, containing my books, papers, and a package of bank bills, which were preserved in good condition.

The Safe was severely tested before and after its fall to the cellar.

With full confidence in the fire-proof qualities of your Safes, I am, truly yours, GEO. W. WRIGHT.

These Safes are secured by the celebrated "La Pelle" Lock, and for sale by STEARNS & MARVIN, No. 164 and 166 Water-st.

The only makers of Salamander Safes combining Rich's and Wilder's Patents.

WHY WILL YOU SUFFER WITH THE LONG train of evils consequent upon that hitherto conquered formidable disease, Dyspepsia, when a certain remedy is at your hand? HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS never fail. Read:

William Clausen, Cornwall, Dec. 5, 1854, said: "We have used your Bitters in our family, and have derived considerable benefit from it."

E. B. Moses, Rhinebeck, N. Y., April 1, 1853, said: "It is with pleasure I inform you of the good effect produced by the use of two bottles of your HOOFLAND BITTERS upon myself. There are now a number of dyspeptics in this town who wish to use it."

W. H. Simpson, Lyons, N. Y., May 14, 1851, said: "My customers are fast learning the value of your HOOFLAND BITTERS. As a medicine, it is in high repute with those who have tried it."

For sale by Druggists and dealers everywhere.

The Locomotive Bachelorette, to which was attached the Bachelor Train, on the Jacksonville Railroad, blew up on Wednesday evening, a few miles beyond Marysville, by which accident the engineer, Gaspar Mathis, and the firemen, THOMAS CONNELLY, were instantly killed, and a brakesman, whose name we did not learn, was so much if not dangerously wounded.

The accident was caused by the want of water in the boiler, and was the result of either gross ignorance or culpable carelessness. The passes were known to be out of order and unsafe to ride; and, under these circumstances, it is a matter of surprise to us that the engineer was allowed to mount the engine.

The force of the explosion was terrible. The engine with thirty-two hundred and seventy pounds from the train, through the thick brushwood of the timber, which was cleared a passage of his mutilated body and dead comrades. The firemen was horribly mangled; his mouth torn out. A portion of his liver was found in one place, an arm in another, his legs in another. The spectacle was shocking to look upon. Mr. CONNELLY was a highly respectable citizen of Edinburg, and a member of the Masonic Lodge of that place. Mr. Mathis, the engineer, was also a young man of high respectability, and of sober, steady habits.

The locomotive was the most complete wreck we have ever seen. Portions of it were thrown a distance of several hundred feet; several freight cars were badly injured by the shock. Both of the locomotives which the company will start into service, and the loss which the company will sustain in consequence of the accident will not fall short of $10,000.—Indianapolis Sentinel, 15th inst.

HYATT'S PATENT LIGHTS.

☞ By the Act of July 4, 1836, Sec. 15, "It shall be in the power of the Court to render judgment above the usual damages, to THREE times the amount thereof." The ruling as well as setting is an infringement.

At the December term of the Supreme Court of the United States, 1854, "Bloom vs. Taggart," Court ruled that in a case where a Patentee has the right to restrict or enlarge his claim, so as to give it validity and to effectuate his invention.

In accordance with the above decision of the Supreme Court, and by the advice of my counsel, Charles M. Keller, Esq., I reconsidered my Patent of Nov. 12, 1845, and the Patent Office, on the 24 April, 1855, gave me a reissue, of which the following is the claim:

"What I claim as my invention is covers for openings to admit of fixed, darks, &c., in metal, than of a Metallic Casing, or perforated Metallic Plates, with the apertures are small, that persons or horses passing over or falling on them may be safely supported by the metal."

FINANCIAL.

$1,000,000 [illegible] VIRGINIA AND TENNESSEE RAILROAD COMPANY.—Proposals will be received by the undersigned for the purchase of the above amount of Bonds of the Company, for the whole or any part of this sum, and payable in money, in the City of New-York, on the 1st day of June next, bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, and secured by a mortgage on the road, franchises, and equipment of the Company, and the guarantee of the State of Virginia, on the 1st of January and July of each year, and one half their amount annually thereafter, upon the first Coupon of the option of the holder.

These bonds are issued under the authority of the State of Virginia, for the purpose of aiding the Company in the work, which all the real estate, franchises and equipments, are pledged, upon which work, the Company have expended over $1,000,000, and have yet to complete the road, and equip it for 170 miles, for which $1,000,000 was taken by the State of Virginia, on the following terms: 6 per cent. interest, and the principal payable in instalments of $100,000 yearly, commencing on the 1st of July, 1854. The remaining $500,000 yearly of the Company is $2,000,000, three-fifths of which is held by the State of Virginia, and the whole amount paid in is $2,000,000.

The length of the road from the city of Lynchburg to the Tennessee line is 204 miles, of which 170 are completed, finished and in operation. The remaining sixty-nine miles require only $300,000 to complete them, and the amount of $500,000 yearly of the Company is necessary to pay the entire road into full condition. There has been expended on the road, about $4,000,000 in construction, rolling stock and expenses—a sum double the amount of both mortgages, which together do not exceed $10,000 per mile of road. The road forms a link in the chain of roads which are to become part of the great route connecting the Ohio River, giving an almost straight line from the Northern and Eastern cities to those on the Gulf of Mexico, and the Mississippi, shortening the distance more than two hundred miles; and there is but one link more to be finished to afford a continuous railroad transportation from the city of Washington to Montgomery, Ala. This is the great route to the West that will come to it as a part of the great South and North line, the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad has a certain local income of its own, which is largely increased by connection of the carriage of last year with only eighty miles completed (9,196,229 70) as being sufficient of itself to support the road. It runs almost its whole length through a region abounding with a variety of minerals of the most valuable natures, such as lead, coal, iron, copper, salt and gypsum, all of which exist in great abundance, which have hitherto been neglected, but which are now being developed, now that they can be conveyed to market. In short the prospects of the road are most flattering, and factory as it has been by the State, and improved property, it is now in the hands of a Board of Directors, a class capital actually paid in, it is believed no security has been recently offered of a better character. The Company have agreed to set apart one per cent, annually on the amount of the bonds from the earnings of the road, as a Sinking Fund to cancel the bonds, and the Directors of the stockholders have adopted, as a line of policy, to authorize no dividend excepting from a cash surplus, after the annual and Sinking Fund have been provided for.

The terms on which the sale will be made are 25 per cent down, and the balance in instalments of 10 per cent every thirty days till all is paid. If the whole amount is paid at once, interest to the 1st July, 1855, will be allowed. The right is reserved to reject any or all bids, if the interest of the Company shall be deemed by the Board of Directors to be best subserved by so doing.

The Bonds will be issued in the following denominations, viz:

1 of of 10,000 dollars	60 of 1,000 dollars.
24 of of 5,000 dollars	60 of 500 dollars.
24 of of 2,000 dollars	120 of 1,000 dollars.
24 of of 1,000 dollars	120 of 1,000 dollars.

No. 10. The smallest Prize is 25 dollars.

The next drawing will take place in June, 1855.

The prices of the shares is as follows:

Twenty for £1 sterling, 25 shares for £20 sterling.
5 shares for £1 sterling, 25 shares for £20 sterling.
25 shares for £10 sterling, 125 shares for £100 sterling.

Tickets will be received on account of American Gold, Notes, Bills of Exchange, and Bank Bills, at the prices of the public, the prices of the shares have always been first of the above rates, and (£4 equal to £1.) on payment of the Prizes, the undersigned make no deduction from the amount.

They have great pleasure in announcing that they are now agents for the Sale of Tickets in the Public Stocks of the British Colonies and Foreign States, and that during the last twelve years they have paid to successful holders of shares in Great Britain, Prizes amounting to £600,000 sterling, which have been distributed in Liverpool, Birmingham, Manchester, London, &c.

After the Drawing, each shareholder will receive a list of the winning numbers. The prizes will be paid in cash at Frankfort-on-the-Maine, Paris, London, New-York, &c. Apply without delay to Messrs. J. A. SCHWARSCHILD & SONS, Bankers, Frankfort-on-the-Maine, Germany, or their House, Messrs. A SCHWARSCHILD & CO., No. 22 Lombard-st., London, where, also, Banking and Commission business will be duly attended to.

CUMBERLAND COAL AND IRON COMPANY.—$100,000 LOAN—FIRST MORTGAGE COUPON BONDS.—Five Hundred Thousand Dollars first mortgage Bonds of the CUMBERLAND COAL AND IRON COMPANY, are now offered for sale, in sums of One Thousand Dollars each, payable on the first day of January, 1865, with interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, in the City of New-York.

These Bonds are secured by a first mortgage to William D. Tappan and Edward W. Dunham, in trust, on the lands of the Company, situate in Allegany County, Maryland, being about 12,000 acres, and containing about 8,000 acres of the great Bituminous Coal Vein of the Company, and the Railroad connecting their Mines with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, with the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, and with the town of Cumberland.

To provide for the payment of these Bonds at and before maturity, the Company have agreed to appropriate and pay into the hands of Trustees Fifty Thousand Dollars annually, as a sinking fund, in default of the payment of which, or of the semi-annual interest, for sixty days after due, the principal shall become due, and the Trustees by authorized to enter upon and sell the said lands and Road, and pay the Bonds.

Sealed proposals, addressed to the President of the Company, will be received at the office of DUNHAM & CO., No. 13 William-st., New-York, until Saturday the 19th day of May next, at 10 o'clock P. M., when they will be opened and the awards made.

You just need will be required to be paid on notification to the Trustee of the appointment of their bids, forty per cent on the first day of June, and fifty per cent on the fifteenth day of June, with liberty to pay the whole at any earlier day.

The Company will reserve the right to reject the whole or any portion of any bid. A. BRADFORD, President.

For further particulars apply to DUNHAM & CO., No. 13 William-st., New-York.

ROCK RIVER VALLEY UNION RAILROAD MORTGAGE BONDS.—The holders of the Rock River Valley Union Railroad 7 per cent Mortgage Bonds, are hereby notified that all of said Railroad and Railroad property embraced in the mortgage of said Road to R. S. Walker, Trustee, dated September 1, 1854, to secure the payment of said Bonds and interest, together with all franchises and appurtenances, were sold by the undersigned Trustee, pursuant to said R. J. Walker in the said Trusts, at public Auction, at Janesville, Wisconsin, on the 24th of April last, and the same was bid off by the undersigned, and conveyed to the purchaser, in accordance with the terms of said mortgage, for the purpose of satisfying the principal and interest of said Bonds, said principal having been declared due and payable, by many holders, on account of default in the payment of the interest, in consequence of default in payment of the interest.

All holders of the said Bonds, who were at parties to the purchase of the mortgaged property, are hereby notified that they can receive their dividend of the proceeds of said sale, by calling at the office of CHARLES BUTLER, No. 12 Wall-st., and delivering up their Bonds.

MEDICAL.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY SINCE THE AGE OF ALCHEMY, or science, has discovered in some of our common vegetables a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst scrofula down to a common pimple.

He has tried it in over 1,100 cases, and never failed, except in two cases, both thunder humor. He has now in his possession testimonials of its virtues, all within 20 miles of Boston.

Four bottles are warranted to cure a worming cure month.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the eyes and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and ringworm scald.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of tetter.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of chilblains.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.

A few or more bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

Reader, I publish not even a thousand bottles of this in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case to expose a cause will wrought first, to cure will this cure humor. I never sold a bottle of it but what said it was the best I tried, it always speaks for itself. There are some things about this much that appears to me surprising—first, that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and yet its values has never been known until I discovered it in 1844; second, that it should cure all kinds of humors.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and great importance of the discovery I will state that in April, 1853, I peddled it, and sold about six bottles per day. In April, 1854, I sold over without bottles per day.

Directions for Use.—Adults, one table spoonful per day; children over 8 years, dessert spoonful; children from five to years, tea spoonful. As no direction can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION. By Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Professor of Diseases of Women. One Hundred Edition (100,000.) Price, pp. 250. On fine paper, extra binding, $1. Every consideration which women is subject, from childhood to womanhood, as also in the married state, is fully explained, with the causes, the symptoms, and also proper mode of treatment, in a plain, chaste, but in the most chaste language, clearly understood. And thus every woman can discover by comparing her own symptoms with those described the nature, character, and consequence of her complaint, and be spared much anxiety and suffering. The wife about to become a mother has often need of instruction and advice of the utmost importance to her future health, in respect to matters of delicacy, which she cannot bring a medical gentleman, will find such instruction and advice in this work. Many symptoms which otherwise would occasion anxiety or alarm. How many are suffering from obstructions or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which unknown the health, and destroy the happiness of thousands, for which the delicacy forbids seeking medical advice? How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb,) or from fluor albus (whites), debility, &c.? How many have a constant agony for months preceding confinement? How many have difficult, if not dangerous deliveries and slow and uncertain recoveries? Some whose lives are hazarded during such times will each find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration and relief. How many by ignorance of the laws of nature, have much misery to the sufferer, to her husband, to her relatives, by a timely possession of this little volume. It is impossible to convey fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage.

New-York Daily Times

NEW-YORK CITY.

[illegible] of the Western Railroad Company.

[illegible] of Directors of the New-York and [illegible] Company took place yesterday at the office of the Company, No. 1 Centre-street. Some time [illegible] by the election to commence, a large number of the Stockholders of the Road were assembled to participate in the proposed balloting. It was expected there would be strong rivalry manifested [illegible], but to some extent however prevented, [illegible] undoubtedly would arise on to the ticket offered by party.

[illegible] Wm. M. Vermilye, H. J. Southward and [illegible] W. Emerson, appointed Inspectors of Election by the Board of Directors at the last meeting, at 12 [illegible] expressed their readiness to proceed with the election.

Mr. Jas. Richards, of Milledgeville, Geo., moved that a Committee on Tickets be appointed to investigate the [illegible] of the proxies submitted, [illegible] by Mr. Hiram Ketchum.

[illegible] that the motion was out of order [illegible] be entertained.

Mr. Richards immediately replied that he saw how [illegible] to be manifested. The same class of votes as at the bottom of the election at Rensselaer, where such votes to manage the road, though under their [illegible] the stock has kept constantly depreciating in value. He wanted a different system of management.

The Chairman announced a second time that the polls were open, and that gentlemen would please proceed [illegible].

[illegible] Mr. Reynolds argued a decided contravention [illegible] of argument. He said he insisted on his rights, and [illegible] argument to explain him.

[illegible] added that such remarks, in the connection in which they were stated, were out of order.

[illegible] said that if he was not the first [illegible] of the Railroad Corporation.

The Chairman said he was counsel to the Board of Directors, but that had nothing to do with his position [illegible] of the Inspectors of the Election. The duty of the Chairman would be conducted impartially. As to the mode of proxies, he was by party would be taken, [illegible] the name of the person offering it being given, [illegible] of the party or parties for whom he appeared. The number of shares each party represented, [illegible] would challenge what votes they [illegible] of the votes would be regarded.

[illegible] Kemper, evidently not entirely cognizant [illegible] and pledge, said there had been [illegible] given by the learned counsel, it was [illegible] to tell whether those voting by proxies, unless [illegible] allowed, might not be represented [illegible] for more parties.

[illegible] Kemper then abruptly terminated his proposed [illegible] Phillips, seeing, no doubt, that he was addressing for little attention, as those present were [illegible] engaged in depositing their ballots.

[illegible] Kemper, indeed, from this point proceeded without interruption. No challenges were offered, [illegible] the Scrutiny rule would be otherwise varied [illegible] Kemper's speech. It appeared, [illegible] announced. The ballot-box, the "Ballot Tube," was declared closed, and following [illegible] number of votes polled, each one having as many votes as he owned shares in the stock of the [illegible].

No. of Votes.		No. of Votes.
William Rhett	72,496	A. J. Akin
John H. Dykers	72,799	Lancaster Underhill
William C. Wetmore	74,466	Albert Smith
[illegible]	72,661	Edwin Crosby
[illegible]	74,461	Samuel T. Tabor
[illegible]	74,461	Nathaniel P. Bailey
[illegible]	74,466

[illegible] "Ballot," the only ballot offered in [illegible], offered only in having the name Henry G. [illegible], into Vice-President of the Road, in the place of Lancaster Underhill. The reported grounds [illegible] which the friends of the parties retired to urged [illegible] to challenge one too well known to need roll-[illegible].

[illegible] Dean, Esq., President of the Road, upon [illegible] of the result of the election, announced, in accordance with a card to the same effect previously published in the Daily Times, his resignation as President of the Board of Directors, the same to take effect from to-day.

A meeting of the newly elected Board of Directors will be held to-day to elect officers.

Assault Followed by Robbery.

Almost all which last night's row occurred in a [illegible] house situated at the corner of Third-street and Avenue A, among a party of Germans who had imbibed rather freely of their favorite beverage. The saloon, or [illegible], being very small, about fifteen of the most [illegible] adjourned to the street for the purpose of [illegible] their differences in a fair and easy fight. During the period Officers Dorsheimer and Mehrhof, of the Seventh Ward, made their appearance and tried to quell the disturbance by ordering the combatants to desist, or they would take them into custody. Instead of the rioters obeying the officers, they united and turned upon the police, and attempted to beat them off the ground. One of the prisoners, named Kerrigan, plunged a knife [illegible] Officer Dorsheimer, inflicting a serious wound.

[illegible] came up at this moment, and the wounded man [illegible] the name of his comrade, exclaiming, "I will [illegible]." Kerrigan then tried to escape, but was rather too badly wounded to effect his purpose. He was [illegible] in a warehouse near the spot where the deed was committed. The knife with which it is supposed he stabbed the officer was found in his possession.

[illegible] were prompted for the wounded man, after which he was conveyed on a litter to his dwelling, No. 49 [illegible]-street. The wound is in likely will prove fatal. Kerrigan and another German, named Andrews, were committed to await the results of the injuries of the wounded man, who now lies in a critical condition.

Magistrate's Office....Tuesday, May 15.

[illegible] BY DETECTIVE FROM OHIO.

On Tuesday morning the Mayor committed for examination two young men, Michael Walter and Christopher Neuck, who were arrested and brought before him by Captain Lennard under the following circumstances:

A letter had been addressed to the Captain by Messrs. Gibbons & Hanson, Chandeliers and Gas Fixture Manufacturers in Cincinnati, dated on the 11th inst., stating that three weeks ago Mr. Gossin [illegible] on the premises kept by Mr. McKinstry, of Cincinnati, who was in pursuit of two men, that had robbed him of a large amount. The men succeeded at that time, but from the strong conviction as to the fact that the parties sought were in New-York, and that the officer received confirmed by an anonymous letter to them, a copy of which was enclosed to the officer. Upon taking the assistance follows a description of the parties. It appears that some Germans "in Rensselaer but next to No. 106 Greenwich-street," and "liquor by good management to cage the birds."

The anonymous letter addressed to Goodis & Manson is dated from New-York, May 7, and is very characteristic.

"You can find Walker and Nauger at No. 106 Greenwich-street. I know all about these two fellows. Hanson is a good fellow. They will be in Chatham [illegible] Do not show or tell anybody [illegible] Next Mon they are going to [illegible] I advise you will have to take the telegraph—do the best you can."

Upon this information their apprehension was not difficult. The police have taken from them three gold watches, [illegible] in daily use, some small amount of money, and [illegible] plunder. We cannot learn precisely the amount of the robbery, but it is stated to be very trifling.

Sunday School Celebrations.

A large number of the Sunday School children of our City had, yesterday afternoon, their Anniversary, which, in consequence of the rain, was adjourned from Tuesday last. At Dr. Cox's Church, in Broome-street, they assembled in large force, went through the usual exercises, and were addressed by Rev. A. A. Woos, Pastor of the Central (Presbyterian) Church, Broome-street; Rev. Mr. Tobler, of the German Church, Rivington-street; Rev. J. R. S. Bissell, and R. G. Parsons, Esq.

At the Market-street Church, (Rev. Mr. Cuyler's,) Divisions Nos. 12, 13, 25, 26, 38 and 41 assembled, making in all nearly a thousand scholars, whose beaming countenances and bright expanding eyes made the sight as lively and pleasant as the day. They sang finely, and were addressed in language befitting the occasion, by Rev. Dr. Nevins, of New-Haven, Rev. Mr. Cuyler, Rev. Mr. Jones, of the Mariner's Church, and by R. G. Parsons, Esq. At the conclusion of the exercises, the children partook of a beautiful supply of refreshments in the Chapel-room, after which they were marshaled to order by their respective teachers, and proceeded in procession to their different Sunday School rooms, where they were dismissed, leaving no doubt for the time when Anniversary will come again.

Expedition to Relieve Dr. Kane.

This expedition, consisting of a store-ship and propeller, will depart for the Polar Regions on the 1st of June next. The sledge boats, made of willow, and covered with vulcanized rubber, were delivered by Jonas W. Bennett, at the Navy-Yard yesterday, agreeable to the instructions of the United States Commissioner. Both vessels are now lying at Brooklyn and every exertion is being made to equip them in season.

Inquests Yesterday.

An inquest was held on the body of the unknown man killed by accident by the Hudson River Railroad cars. Another was held on the body of Barney Kitts, found floating in the river, and another was held on a man who deliberately committed suicide by drowning at the foot of Twenty-third-street, about 50 years of age. Still another on the body of Patrick Andrews, drowned at Gravesend Bay, and another and the last, on the body of an unknown man found floating in the river at the foot of One Hundred and Forty-fourth-street. They were all ordinary cases.

A Temperance Toper.

Mr. H. F. Robinson, of the Carson League, has made affidavit complaints against various hotel-keepers for selling liquor on Sunday. He swears to drinking on the premises, on the 5th of March, two glasses of brandy and one of whisky; on the 1st of April, to having drunk seven glasses of brandy and two of whisky; 5th of April, five of brandy, and two of whisky. The examination came off yesterday before Justice Roberts, who will give his decision on the case next Monday. The complainant desired the case to be withdrawn or dismissed, but the Judge, for once, was a Carson League supporter, and refused to dismiss the case.

Recognizance.

Christopher Neuck and Michael Walter, Germans, were yesterday arrested by Captain Lennard of the Second Ward, charged with having committed a heavy embezzlement of money and goods on the firm of Goodwin & Makin, Cincinnati, Ohio. They came here for the purpose of taking passage to California. They do not deny the charge.

Careless Driving.

A child of Captain Briggs, Oliver-street, was run over by a wagon and died shortly afterwards from the injuries sustained. The driver, Thomas Burgess, was arrested and held to await the action of the Jury.

To Those who would Know Themselves.—Phrenology is the most useful of all modern discoveries. It teaches life and its laws, and unfolds human nature in all its aspects. Its fundamental doctrine is, that each mental faculty is exercised by means of a portion of the brain, called its organ, the size and quality of which are proportionate to its powers. Its proof is universal nature. All animals, as compared with all others, and all human beings as contrasted with all others and with all animals, furnish living demonstration that it is interwoven through all nature. Professor Sullivan says: "Phrenology undertakes to accomplish for man what philosophy professes for the material world; it claims to disclose the real state of things, and to present nature unveiled, and in her true features."
